OUR STATE AFFAIRS.

Coalition of the Democrats Against the New Charter.

Seventy-Three New Bills Introduced Yesterday.

Testimonials to be Given by the State to Veterans of the War.

Erie Capital Stock to be Reduced One-Third.

How "Aleck" Frear was Elected in the Fifteenth New-York District.

From Our Own Correspondent.

ALBANY, Wednesday, Feb. 28, 1872.

The vote on the Seventy's Charter, last evening, has given rise to a good deal of comment among Republicans today. The charter was presented and urged upon the Legislature as a non-partisan measure by a committee claiming to represent the best men of both parties. Republicans were told that they must ignore the fact that they constituted two-thirds and more of the Legislature, and must vote for the charter on pain of being denounced as enemies of reform, if not personally corrupt. Now they behold the entire Democratic Party as represented in the Assembly suddenly wheeling about and voting in a body against the charter, and denouncing it as a Republican measure. Even the "Reform" Democrats, headed by Mr. TILDEN, with a single exception, join hands with TOM FIELDS and the remnants of the old Tammany guard to defeat the leading reform measure of the non-partisan body which gave them their seats in the Legislature. The public can see from this treachery exactly how much the word "reform" signifies in the mind of a Democrat. The reunion and consolidation of the Democratic Party is all they are looking for, and all they have been looking for, from the day they were hurled from power in November last by an indignant and outraged public; and they have used the cry of "reform" simply as a blind to hoodwink a Republican Legislature into the belief that they ought not to use the power conferred upon them by the people, to add strength or credit to the Republican Party. The next reform measure to be brought before the Legislature by the Committee of Seventy is a stringent Registry and Election law; and the public will find the Democrats in the Legislature opposing this, as they have always opposed every attempt to guard the ballot-box against fraud. The Albany Argus of this morning has given them the cue in some remarks about a registry law introduced yesterday by Mr. ALVORD, in which the stale old Democratic argument is used that "a Registry law is a cumbrous, expensive and unnecessary affair. It costs the people" (says the Argus) "a large sum of money and consumes in the aggregate a great amount of time. It is a great machine to place obstructions in the way of voters."

NEW BILLS.

The Assembly took up the regular order of business this morning, and members emptied their drawers of a load of bills, petitions, remonstrances and resolutions that have been accumulating on their hands during the recess. Seventy-three new bills were introduced—the largest number on any one day since the beginning of the session. Most of them are of a local and unimportant character. Among those affecting New-York and vicinity are the following: Mr. MACKAY introduced a bill incorporating the "Universalist Association." It is said to be the design of the Association to erect a commodious building in the upper part of Broadway for a reading-room, lyceum, conversation-room, &c., to be open for the free use of young men, residents as well as strangers in New-York.

THE BROOKLYN WATER BOARD.

Mr. MORTON, from the Committee on Cities, favorably reported the bill of the Committee of Seventy-five for the reorganization of the Brooklyn Water Board. It provides for three Commissioners to be appointed by the Mayor, Auditor, Controller and President of the Prospect Park Commission. An amendment was inserted in the Committee abolishing the office of Street Commissioner and transferring his duties to the new Water Board.

A MEMORIAL BILL.

A bill was introduced authorizing the Governor and Adjutant-General to cause to be engrossed and printed a suitable testimonial for each officer or soldier who served on the quota of New-York during the war of the rebellion and was honorably discharged from or died in the service. In case of the death of the officer or soldier, the testimonial to be given to the widow or next of kin. The expense of the testimonials shall not exceed $10,000.

MR. PELL NOT ABSENT.

The telegraph should have spelled the name of PECK instead of PELL as among the absentees on account of sickness, when the vote on the charter was taken last evening.

THE NEW HEALTH OFFICER.

In the Senate, the noticeable feature of the proceedings was the confirmation, in Executive session, of Dr. CARNOCHAN'S successor, Dr. VANDERPOEL, which, as was foreshadowed in this correspondence yesterday, was done as a matter of course.

THE LIQUOR QUESTION.

The Senate Excise Committee gave a hearing to several citizens from various parts of the State, among them Ex-Senator O'DONNEL, on the bills before the Legislature on the liquor question. Most of the speakers favored the proposition for local prohibition—that is, to submit the question of license or no license to the people of the towns and villages throughout the State.

The Erie Classification Bill—Amendments to Reduce the Capital Stock by One-Third—The Charter to be Sent to the Senate Today.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

ALBANY, Feb. 28.—A final hearing was had this evening on the bill to repeal the Erie Classification act before the Railroad Committee of the Assembly and the Judiciary Committee of the Senate. Judge SELDEN and Mr. SHEARMAN appeared for JAY GOULD, and Messrs. HALE and SOUTHMAYD for the people. SELDEN'S argument was devoted mainly to beating into the heads of the committeemen the novel and preposterous proposition that the Legislature has no power to oust GOULD and his gang from their places as directors of the Erie Railroad. Their election, according to this legal luminary, stands in the nature of a contract, the obligations of which cannot be impaired without a violation of the Constitution, so that even if the Classification act were repealed they would have a right to hang on to their offices until their terms expired. SELDEN'S argument was almost as powerful as TOM FIELDS against the power of the Legislature to remove OAKEY HALL from the Mayoralty. GEORGE O. JONES submitted an amendment to the bill providing for a reduction of the capital stock of Erie to a basis represented by the actual capital spent in constructing and fitting out the road. Nothing remains now but for the Committee to make their report. They can have no excuse for further delay, and a report may be looked for this week. Mr. WHITE, of Brooklyn, Chairman of the Assembly Committee, has been anxious to report the bill for a long time past, but was overruled by his associates. His Committee is to have an executive session on Friday, when, if the Committee refuse to report the bill, he threatens to resign his place as Chairman. The Senate Judiciary Committee, which has Senator O'BRIEN'S Repeal bill in charge, will make their report as soon as Mr. ALLEN and Mr. AMES, two members of the Committee now absent return. The Erie Ring has a host of lobbyists here from all the leading towns on the line of the road, who are bringing the influence to bear against the repeal which they can muster, both political and financial. If they had any faith in SELDEN'S Constitutional argument, one would think that they had better stay at home and save their money and wind. The Seventy's Charter will be sent up to the Senate tomorrow, when it will have to be reprinted with the amendments, and will not reach the Committee on Cities before Friday. A day will be set apart for a hearing on its merits the fore part of next week, when TILDEN and others will make another effort to shape it to suit their wishes. It is said that Gov. HOFFMAN will neither sign it nor veto it, but will escape his share of the responsibility by letting it become a law by the ten day limitation. S.

HOW FREAR WAS ELECTED.

The Art of Counting by Democratic Rules—A Specimen Custodian of the Ballots—"Aleck" Frear in a Hopeless Minority.

The following are the essential portions of the report of the Assembly Committee on Elections on the contest between Messrs. KILLIAN and FREAR, for the seat from the Fifteenth District of the County of New-York:

In the present case it was conceded that the number of votes as returned by the district canvassers and allowed by the county canvassers, and upon which the certificate of election was given, was: For ALEXANDER FREAR, 2,818; for FREDERICK KILLIAN, 2,791; giving FREAR an apparent majority of 27. It was also conceded that the returns made by the district canvassers in the Twenty-fifth Election District of the Twentieth Ward, and allowed by the county canvassers, were for member of Assembly: FREAR, 228; KILLIAN, 60; HARRIS, 36; LOGAN, 17. It was shown by one of the constable's witnesses—a clerk in one of the largest banks of the City of New-York—that the canvass in the Twenty-fifth Election District was conducted throughout in a very loose and disorderly manner, with scarcely any regard to the requisites and formalities prescribed by law. That in the canvass of the general ticket containing the names for State, City and County officers, in all nearly thirty-five names, the inspectors seem to have made a count, the poll clerks keeping, or purporting to keep, a tally; that one of the poll clerks said to the other: "Here, let's give the Democrats 227 and the Republicans 110 all the way round—that'll make it about fair," and the returns were accordingly so made and signed by the inspectors of election. This was not denied, although one of the inspectors, called on behalf of the incumbent, testified that he had taken charge of the "splits," of which he thought there were fifty; and another inspector testified that the return of the general ticket was correct—"just as correct" as the returns made on the Assembly ticket.

In the canvass of the Assembly ticket but two of the inspectors took part; one of them simply received bunches of tickets handed him by the other, each bunch being supposed to contain ten, and in two instances remonstrated at the other's miscount. No tally was announced by the inspectors or kept by the poll clerks, nor was any announcement made of the vote, though each of these matters, together with the manner in which it shall be performed, is specifically required and set forth in the Election law, and mentioned with great particularity and minuteness in the instructions issued from the "Bureau of Elections," in the City of New-York, to the canvassers and poll clerks. One of the poll clerks ultimately asked, "What did those fellows get?" whereupon one of the inspectors answered, after consultation with a bystander, "FREAR 228, KILLIAN 60, HARRIS 36 and LOGAN 17," and the returns were accordingly so made out and signed by the inspectors. The inspectors were called as witnesses on behalf of the incumbent, but although they contradicted some of the testimony given on the part of the contestant, yet they contradicted each other in so many material points as to produce conviction in the mind of the Committee of their bad faith and intent to defraud.

It was proved that in this Twenty-fifth Election District of the Twentieth Ward at least ninety-eight residents and legal voters therein voted for FREDERICK KILLIAN, the contestant, for Member of Assembly. Ninety-one of these witnesses testified that they so voted. These witnesses seemed to be of great intelligence and respectability, and included clergymen, physicians, lawyers, bankers and merchants, who, though subjected to a rigid and somewhat extended cross-examination, adhered to their statements with clearness and positiveness. Yet these canvassers return only sixty votes for KILLIAN in this district.

It seems proper to observe, in connection with these frauds and irregularities in the Twenty-fifth Election District of the Twentieth Ward, that one of the Inspectors of Election, JAMES RILEY, who, to avoid a rule of the Committee excluding all witnesses except the one under examination, passed several days in their room under assumed names, testified that he had been employed by the Commissioners of Emigration, coming from Ward's Island into the district but a short time before the election; that he was appointed Inspector of Election; that he advocated the election of Mr. FREAR, who, by the way, is one of the Commissioners of Emigration; that he resided at and voted from the Leeds Arms, a bar-room and boarding-house; that he never owned a trunk or carpet-bag; that he had but two shirts, which he considered an adequate supply for six months without washing; that he had no apparel other than that he carried on his back or in a newspaper; this person, a vagabond, and evidently of the lowest character, took charge of the Assembly box, and was permitted by the other inspectors so to do, during almost the entire day, and deposited, or was supposed to deposit in the box, the ballots for Assembly offered by the voters.

The returns from this election district being rejected, the vote for Assembly in the entire Assembly district, as between the contestant and incumbent, is: FREAR, 2,590; KILLIAN, 2,731; giving KILLIAN a majority over FREAR of 141 votes. But even if the returns of this district be not rejected, the general result remains unchanged. KILLIAN being allowed the ninety-one proved to have been given for him, FREAR will be assumed that the vote for HARRIS and LOGAN was correctly returned, and the votes cast for KILLIAN, but not returned for him, were given to FREAR, then taking the votes as proved before the Committee, the total vote in the Assembly District, as between the parties stood, will be: FREAR, 2,780; KILLIAN, 2,822. KILLIAN'S majority over FREAR, 49. If it be assumed that the number of votes returned for FREAR be correct, and that the votes proved to have been given for KILLIAN, and not returned for him, were either destroyed or returned for the other candidates, then the vote of the entire Assembly district will be, giving to KELIAN the votes proved to have been cast for him: FREAR, 2,818; KILLIAN, 2,829. KILLIAN'S majority, 11.

A WESTERN VENDETTA.

Shooting Affray in a Church—One Man Killed and Two Wounded.

ST. LOUIS, Feb. 28.—GEORGE WEBB was shot and killed and JAMES AID and DAVID HAMILTREE wounded on Saturday last in an affray at Salem Church, five miles from Independence, Mo. It appears that a bitter family feud existed between the WEBB and AID families, and as both parties belonged to the Salem Captist Church, an effort was made to settle the difficulty through the influence of the church. With this view a meeting of the respective friends of the families was held on Saturday, and while efforts were being made to heal the differences between AID and WEBB, a few angry words were spoken, whereupon WEBB shot and wounded one of AID'S brothers. In attempting to stop the fight DAVID HAMILTREE was wounded and WEBB killed, the latter receiving seven bullets in his body.

Annual Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church of New-Jersey

TRENTON, N. J., Feb. 28.—The New-Jersey annual Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church met here today. About 120 preachers and officers were present. The Conference was opened by a short address by Bishop AMES, who presided. Rev. ISAIAH D. KING was appointed Secretary, with five assistants. The Committee on Sabbath Desecration made a report. The trustees of the Vineland Seminary reported that $6,500 had been contributed, mainly by ministers, conditioned upon the completion of the sum of $10,000. The persons on the supernumerary list were continued. As far as the reports were concerned, the work on the various appointments looks well all over the district. Last evening a large meeting of the Church Extension Society was held, at which addresses were delivered by Rev. H. C. WHITTAKER and Rev. Mr. KYNETT.

ALABAMA DISPUTE.

Discussion on the Fishery Clause of the Treaty to be Postponed—Feeling in Paris on the Matter.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 28.—The second Tuesday in March has been set aside by the House to consider the bill to carry out the provisions of the fisheries clause of the treaty. The Foreign Affairs Committee resolved, in its meeting today, not to press action upon this bill at that time, nor until such time as the present excitement over the Alabama claims shall have toned down, and the complications arising therefrom mollified. The Committee deem it unwise to endanger the success of the bill by antagonizing it with the Alabama difficulty.

PARIS, Feb. 28.—Diplomatic authorities here are confident that England will finally admit the competency of the General Board of Arbitration to consider the indirect claims. It is anticipated that the American reply will be quite as conciliatory as Earl GRANVILLE'S note.

FRANCE.

Payment of the War Debt—Trial of a Dishonest Official—Reported Alliance Between Germany, Austria and Italy.

PARIS, Feb. 28.—The German Government has notified the French Minister of Finance that it will accept the anticipatory payment of 410,000,000 francs of the war indemnity, with a discount of five per cent. M. POUYER-QUERTIER will immediately pay the amount, thereby saving 20,000,000 francs. Three more men-of-war have been fitted out to cruise in the British Channel, to guard the coast against a Bonapartist expedition. An Ex-Prefect of the Department of Eure, has been tried for misappropriating 200,000 francs contributed by the Lancashire operatives for the relief of France after the war. It is rumored that the Prussian Ambassador at Paris is negotiating with the French Government for the return of the Polish emigrants. The Count DE CHAMBORD was hissed by the populace at Dardrecht. M. H. FOURNIER has been nominated as Minister to Rome. The Assembly has rejected a bill the object of which was to commit the Chamber to a movement for the payment of the war indemnity by voluntary subscriptions. During the debate Minister LEFRANC showed that the subscriptions were insufficient. The Patrie asserts that the mission of Prince FREDERICK CHARLES, of Prussia, who is now in Rome, is to bring about an alliance between Germany, Austria and Italy.

Significance of M. Rouher's Election.

Correspondence of the London Standard.

M. ROUHER has been returned for Corsica by an overwhelming majority, in spite of all the efforts of the Government to secure his defeat. M. THIERS has before this sustained many an electoral rebuff, but he may now exclaim:

"I've met with many a breese before,
But never such a blow."

According to the Ordre the man whom OLLIVIER, in his opposition days, described as "the Vice-Emperor," got eighty per cent. of the votes recorded; but though there may be a little exaggeration in that estimate, MM. POZZO DI BORGO and SENARD, with all the support of Prefects, Sub-Prefects, Mayors, gardes champêtres, gendarmes, and Government school-masters, have been ignominiously beaten. The most curious and, I may add, the most suggestive and, indeed, ominous vote is that of the army. You are aware that under the sapient electoral law M. THIERS has kept in force the military are entitled to vote, and thus the Corsicans in the army of Paris and Versailles voted yesterday in their respective quarters:

	Rouher.	Sanelli.	Borgo.
Army of Versailles	169	1	0
Courbevoie	33	1	1
Paris	249	9	8
St. Cloud	141	1	9
Total	662	12	20

Now soldiers are very gregarious in their opinions as well as in their habits, and this vote appears to me very significant as to what the military think, hope and wish. The fact of gentlemen professing lukewarm Republicanism having been elected in the Eure and Calvados cannot be set against a fact of such magnitude as M. ROUHER'S return. Votes must be weighed as well as counted, and the return of a dozen respectable bourgeois, or rural partisans of M. THIERS, would not attenuate the fact that Bonapartism still survives, not only in Corsica, but also in the ranks of the army, and that it has now a representative in the Chamber who, besides being a mouthpiece of Imperialism, is the natural leader of the Anti-Protectionist Party in France. M. LEON SAY (whose resignation has not been accepted, and who is himself a distinguished member of the Free Trade Party) will be found voting with M. ROUHER as a Deputy, and receiving orders from M. THIERS as Prefect of the Seine.

GREAT BRITAIN.

Queen to Make a Trip to Germany—Home Rule Riot.

LONDON, Feb. 29—6 A. M.—It is reported that Queen VICTORIA is going to Germany to visit her daughter, the wife of the Prince Imperial. The Lord Mayor today presented an address to the Prince of WALES. There was some rioting at Killarney today on the arrival of the member of Parliament for Kerry. The mob commenced to pelt the Police with stones, when the Riot Act was read, and the Police prepared to charge with fixed bayonets. The crowd was finally dispersed and order restored. Nobody was seriously injured.

GENERAL EUROPEAN NEWS.

Another Proof of Russian Preparations for War—Detention of a Steamer.

BERLIN, Feb. 28.—The health of the Emperor WILLIAM is improving.

VIENNA, Feb. 28.—A Russian spy has been detected at Lemberg sketching the fortifications, and condemned to a year's imprisonment. The International Society is reported to be organizing strikes, with the object of preventing the International Exhibition here.

LIVERPOOL, Feb. 28.—The steam-ship Parthia, damaged yesterday by collision, will be detained some days for repairs.

MEXICO.

Progress of the Revolution—Determination of the Texan Stock-Raisers to Protect Themselves.

MATAMORAS, Mexico, Feb. 28.—The river steamer San Juan left Brownsville this morning for Camargo, loaded with bonded goods. The Mexican authorities abandoned the idea of stopping her on route, but propose to start a force, and, in conjunction with CORTINA, capture Camargo before her arrival. Reports via Tampico state that the revolutionists have captured San Luis Potosi.

BROWNSVILLE, Texas, Feb. 28.—A meeting of prominent stock-raisers in Western Texas is called to meet here for the purpose of terminating the depredations. In the absence of support from the Government, they will advocate protecting themselves by making reprisals. The feeling is very bitter here.

New Educational Scheme in New-Jersey.

TRENTON, N. J., Feb. 28.—A public meeting is now being held in the Assembly-room, in favor of a new system of education for the State, presented by a Commission consisting of Prof. MCCOSH, of Princeton College, Dr. CAMPBELL, of Rutgers, and CHARLES D. DESHLER. Addresses were delivered by Dr. CAMPBELL and Mr. DESHLER, who brought forth strong arguments in favor of the new system. The main features are efficient Normal Schools and the appointment of seven inspectors who are required to make thorough examinations of all schools in their respective districts. This, it was claimed, would put New-Jersey in the front rank of education.

More Indian Depredations.

SAN FRANCISCO, Feb. 28.—A dispatch from Arizona says Martinery Station, on Dale Creek, was captured by the Apaches. Three men were killed, and six stage-horses captured.

Personal.

Among the arrivals in town is the Countess VAN DE VYVER, better known in the literary world under her nom de plume of the "Countess Paula." The lady is understood to contemplate writing a book on America, and, contrary to the usual practice, intends to remain some time in the country to collect her material. Mme. VAN DE VYVER is well known in the political and literary circles of more than one European capital, had just come from Washington, and is stopping at the Clarendon.

WASHINGTON NEWS.

Mr. Sumner on the Sale of Arms to France.

He Would Abandon the Alabama Claims for His Resolution—The St. Croix and Bayfield Railroad Lands—Miscellaneous.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 28.—The attempt of the Tribune's Washington sneaks who spy out Congressmen's private business, to make it appear that SCHURZ'S last speeches are not going to New-Hampshire and Connecticut under Democratic auspices and at Government expense, is of a piece with other like misrepresentations. Many Democrats have subscribed largely for this document, and the paper is still circulating, exclusively among Democrats. The Republicans will meet SCHURZ'S subterfuges and shifting assertions with FRELINGHUYSEN'S masterly speech of Monday, in which he compelled the pettifogger to admit that the main point of the investigation was to find out who cheated France, for France, he said, had been cheated, though he admitted that it was not done by this Government. A prominent gentleman, who has not listened to this debate, but who to become posted has read it up in the Globe, says that he has been utterly surprised at the weakness of SCHURZ'S arguments, and that his speeches as printed show that he has successively abandoned every point taken, that he has both assailed and vindicated the Secretary of War, that he has declared and denied the violation of neutrality, that he has asserted the existence of irregularities in the Treasury on this account, and then admitted that his statement was untrue, and that he has shuffled along, driven from one point to another until his last refuge is that if the Secretary of War didn't do wrong in the thing charged, he did in another thing, and violated the statute by selling more arms than he ought, thus leaving the country defenseless, only to be brought to bay by the official statement that the arsenals still contained over half a million stand of serviceable arms. The fact is, SCHURZ'S speeches, divested of his audacious impudence of manner and theatrical style, are among the most common-place productions that fill the Globe. As to SCHURZ'S ability and wisdom as a political leader, people will not forget that in 1864 he was engaged in a precisely similar movement as the present. He tried to carry the Germans off to Cleveland in a third-party movement for the purpose of nominating for President a man who was more of a Red Republican than Mr. LINCOLN. The Fremont fizzle was the result, and SCHURZ'S announcement yesterday that he was not going over to the Democracy is looked upon here as a repetition of his Cleveland blunder in 1864.

The Senate will give still another day or two to the discussion of Mr. SUMNER'S resolution. The audiences are rather increasing than diminishing, and today there were as many persons present in the galleries as on any day previous, and hundreds had to go away because the Senate would not again throw open its cloak and retiring rooms to such a swarm as crowded into them and upon the Senate floor on two other days. Mr. SUMNER took the floor at 1 o'clock, and spoke about an hour and three-quarters. Mr. SUMNER claims that the War Department sold to agents of one of the belligerent Powers knowingly, if it failed to make inquiry in respect to each sale, whether the purchaser was buying with the purpose of selling to either of the warring nations. In effect, he would require a bond of each purchaser of arms in the late European conflict that he would not sell to either France or Germany, or agents of either. He would prohibit a purchaser from engaging in a transaction which he himself admits to be perfectly legitimate under the law, the private party in all cases being subject to the risk of loss by capture of his merchandise by the country at war with that to which he has made the sale. The argument on the other side is that the simple fact of the existence of a foreign war was not a sufficient reason for starting an inquiry with respect to each bid, to find out what interests were behind the bidder. Mr. SUMNER in time of a foreign war would suspect every person proposing to buy arms of the Government, of being an agent of one of the warring Powers, unless the contrary was proved, but the other side claims that neutral duties are fully observed, by not suspecting any purchasers of being such agents unless there were other causes of suspicion than the mere existence of a foreign war. Mr. SUMNER'S extreme position on this question he did not try to establish by precedents or authorities, but justified it upon high moral grounds, which he hardly endeavors to maintain have yet been occupied by nations or publicists. He wants our own Government to be the first to take this advanced step, though he did not bring proof of the culpability of our officers in obeying the existing code, instead of one that had not then been framed or obeyed by others. He claims, on the same high moral grounds, that having broken this unwritten law in favor of France, we must protect her from the dishonest practice of her own agents, provided those agents were American citizens. If France has paid more for the arms than if her agents had been honest, we must look up the culprits who have pocketed the margin. In other words, having failed to fulfill our neutral duties toward Germany by letting some of our arms get into French hands, we shall now vindicate our course, and appease the feelings of injured Germans by doing another favor to France in keeping her from being cheated in the first instance. He says he is willing to abandon the Alabama claims, if they cannot be prosecuted without giving up the attempt to discover whether our own neutral obligations have not been observed. Mr. HARLAN followed Mr. SUMNER. His important point was made by bringing forward a statement from the War Department that there are now in the arsenals of the United States 560,361 stand of arms, from which it would not appear that the country was quite so defenseless as Mr. SCHURZ tried to show yesterday by garbling Ordnance Department reports. Mr. TRUMBULL'S motion to reconsider the adoption of Mr. CONKLING'S amendment touching the investigation of communications with foreign agents, was defeated by 19 to 28, the Republicans voting with the minority being Ferry of Connecticut, Hill, Logan, Robertson, Sprague, Tipton, Trumbull and West. Mr. SUMNER today indorsed both the integrity and ability of the Secretary of War, but Mr. SCHURZ yesterday charged him with grossly violating one of our own statutes. It will be seen from this, as well as other things, that there is as little agreement between SUMNER and SCHURZ, as to what needs investigation, as there is between SCHURZ'S own assertions in his different speeches.

THE JAPANESE EMBASSY.

The Japanese embassy are expected to arrive here to-morrow evening. A large portion of the Arlington Hotel has been engaged and is in preparation to receive them. An official reception has been arranged to be given in their honor next Tuesday night at the Masonic Temple. It is designed to be one of the grandest affairs of the kind ever arranged here. The designs for the decorations of the hall have been accepted, and the work will begin next Saturday. It is said that in the decorations effects will be produced that have never been undertaken in this city. Admittance will be by card, and the invitations are now engraving. The affair is in the hands of Gen. MYERS, Assistant Quartermaster of the War Department, under general direction of the Secretary of State, who is using every effort and the extent of the means placed at his disposal to devise such a reception as will even impress visitors accustomed to oriental magnificence.

THE HOUSE.

The Pacific Railroad Committee have the morning hour in the House to-morrow. They will report the bill allowing the Central Pacific Railroad Company to occupy Goat Island for the terminus of its road, and for the docks required by its business. The entire time of the House today, after recommitting Mr. MERRIAM'S bill, and passing a number of minor bills from the Senate, was occupied with the Senate bill extending the time for the completion of the St. Croix and Bayfield Railroad and renewing the grant of lands which was first made in 1856, and has been twice renewed since then. The fact that the land involved will go to the Northern Pacific Road, if this local road does not get them, secures many friends for the bill who are opposed to making any new land grants. The further fact that a very large amount of this land has been taken up by actual settlers at $2 50 per acre, on the assurance that a railroad was likely to be built, brings up a question of good faith, which influences some men's votes; for, if the road is not built, the settlers will have a legal remedy against the Government for the difference between $2 50 and the Government prices. The enemies of the bill, under the leadership of Mr. HOLMAN, the "great objector," delayed final action by a series of the most determined filibustering motions that have been made this session. Finally the House had ordered the previous question by a decisive vote. The bill comes up as unfinished business to-morrow, and has a clear majority of twenty. Mr. TOWNSEND, of New-York, made one of his sporadic sensations in the House today, by introducing a resolution declaring that the President should begin negotiations looking to the withdrawal of the indirect claims for damages. Mr. TOWNSEND was peremptorily frowned down, not only by Republicans, but by leading Democrats, and retired in silence to the perimeter of the circle in which he sits.

A CHAPTER OF CASUALTIES.

A Boy Crushed to Death Between Two Cars—Death of a Brakeman—A Man Burned to Death in His House—A Teamster Thrown from His Wagon and Killed.

From Our Own Correspondent.

BINGHAMTON, N.Y., Tuesday, Feb. 27, 1872.

The past few days have been attended with a singular fatality in this vicinity. Accidents of the most serious nature have been of daily occurrence, one of the saddest of which was the death, yesterday, of an interesting lad named EDDY BURKE, on the Erie Railway, at Elmira. He was sent on an errand, and a freight-train was moving slowly past the crossing where he had to get over the railroad track. It was a long train, and he very foolishly endeavored to climb between two of the cars instead of waiting until it had passed. He had drawn himself partly up when the train stopped suddenly, the two cars coming together with a crash, catching one of the boy's legs between the bumpers, splintering the bone and mangling the flesh fearfully. When the train started ahead the boy fell from the cars, and would have been crushed beneath the wheels but for a gentleman catching him in his arms and drawing him out quickly. Besides the terrible injury he sustained in the leg, the unfortunate boy was found to have been very seriously hurt internally. The leg was amputated, but death ensued in a few hours.

The day before the above a young man named BRADLEY, of Watkins, entered the service of the Lehigh Valley Railroad Company as a brakeman. He had been on the road but a few hours when he was caught between two cars and so terribly injured that he died in a short time.

On Sunday, a prominent citizen of Schuyler County, was burned to death in his house, which was destroyed by fire. His name was EDWIN R. SUTTON, and, in company with his family, had been to church. On their way home they discovered their residence to be on fire. Mr. SUTTON started on ahead, as he remarked, to save some valuable papers he had in the house. When the others reached the house he was still within, although the building was entirely enveloped in flames. His wife shouted for him to come out, and some neighbors who had arrived endeavored to find out in which part of the house he was, and rescue him, but all to no purpose. The house burned to the ground, and as soon as it was possible search was made in the ruins for the remains of the unfortunate man. His body was found in one corner of the cellar, the furthest from any way of escape, in a sitting posture, burned to a char. An old cupboard had stood on the spot, and it is supposed that he had become entirely blinded and confused by the smoke, or that, finding his exit from the house was cut off, he had sought safety for the time in the cupboard. Mr. SUTTON was highly respected, and his terrible death has thrown a gloom over the community. He was thirty-six years old.

Yesterday afternoon, as CALVIN CROFOOT, a teamster, in the employ of BLANCHARD & BARTLETT, was driving up Chenango-street, in Binghamton, one wheel of his wagon ran into a deep rut, throwing him out upon the head. His skull was crushed in, and he received other severe injuries. He died in a few minutes afterward. He was fifty years old, and leaves a large family.

THE WEATHER.

Events and Probabilities.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 29—1 A. M.—The barometer has risen since Tuesday night in New-England, the lowest pressure having apparently moved slowly eastward. The highest barometer is central on Lake Superior, but the pressure has very generally fallen from the lakes to the gulf and South Atlantic coast. The low barometer which was in Texas has moved north-eastward, and is now apparently central in Northern Alabama and Georgia. Easterly winds, with rain, prevail from Georgia to North Carolina, and north-east winds, with snow, in Illinois and Kentucky. North-east winds and clear weather have succeeded in Texas.

PROBABILITIES.

The central lowest barometer will probably move north-eastward over the Ohio Valley and lower lakes on Thursday; brisk, and possibly dangerous, north-east winds prevail on Lakes Michigan and Erie, and fresh north-east winds, with rain, extend along the Atlantic Coast to New-York, by Thursday morning; both west winds and clearing weather prevail, on Thursday, in the Gulf States; cloudy weather, with north-east winds, prevail very generally on the lakes and in New-England, south-west of Maine. Dangerous winds are not anticipated for Thursday morning on the Atlantic and Gulf coasts.

Late Paris Gossip—Alexander Dumas' Letter—Sardou's New Play—Tokens of Its Success.

From Our Own Correspondent.

PARIS, Thursday, Feb. 8, 1872.

The past few days have been particularly rich in incidents and events, and I hardly know where to begin my rambling commentary upon them. It is not often that we have so many ideas crowded into so short a space of time. The remarkable letter of ALEXANDER DUMAS, fils; the excitement over "Rabagas," the new five-act comedy, by VICTORIEN SARDOU; the patriotic subscription for the payment of the war indemnity; the votes in the Assembly against the return to Paris, and the English Treaty of Commerce; the resignation of M. CASIMIR PERIER as Minister of the Interior; the split between the two monarchical factions, and between the half-formed fusion of the Legitimists and Bonapartists; the rumor of a new Russian alliance and a grand aurora borealis—are among the prominent topics which have been crowded into the past three or four days. With all this the bourse has been agitated and uncertain, but, owing to the return of fine weather, none of these things, the five-act comedy excepted, have produced the usual amount of flutter and excitement. Sunday morning dawned warm, bright and beautiful, the sun came out with the strength of Springtide, and, forgetting everything else, tout le monde, thought only of passing society in review along the Champs Elysées, or of joining the long train hurrying away to the Bois de Boulogne. During the evening it was warm enough to sit out of doors along the boulevards, and gossip would have had its swing had not a splendid aurora-polaris, to use the latest expression, come to furnish a subject of conversation and curiosity, and to direct attention from the topics of the day. It was a splendid show, rising just over the Arc de l'Etoile, and, inbroad, crimson rays stretching up to the very zenith. Nearly everyone fancied that it was the reflection of a vast incendiary beyond Los Invalides, or toward Autruil, and it was only when the reporters, who had hastily left their books to run off after an item, began to return, that we knew the character of this grand display. It was not equal, however, to the grand aurora of 1870, and conversation turned upon recollections of the three October nights when the sky was blood-red from horizon to horizon.

ALEXANDRE DUMAS' LETTER,

The letter of ALEXANDRE DUMAS arrived at an unfortunate moment for its success. For a long time we have known that DUMAS was preparing a "second letter," which was to exceed the first by many degrees, and in literary and journalistic circles it has long been expected. It came upon the very day of a "first representation," and that, as I have told you, takes precedence of all. A few proof-sheets were sent to the Press as an appetizer for the public, and this instalment was crowded away into odd corners by the first critiques of SARDOU'S play. It is impossible for me to give you anything like a comprehensive account of this letter. It is clever, sarcastic, and admirably well written; it abounds in sharp thrusts at his country and countrymen, and in brilliant, sparkling metaphor. It has been polished and repolished for weeks and weeks, and it was meant to fall upon us like a magnificent piece of fire-works at the end of a fête. It would be unfair to liken it to JULES JANIN'S "Lundis," for JANIN is pedantic and heavy in comparison with DUMAS. In a word, it was intended for a sensation, and would have made one beyond question, had it not fallen in with the new piece at the Vaudeville. "Rabagas" took the fancy of the crowd and became the "idea" of the moment. Two days later a new instalment of the letter was sent out, but that fell in with the vote against the return to Paris, and now, if the editor of the review in which the letter is to appear, is a wise man, he will withhold his edition until he can reasonably hope for a day of calm. One point only can I notice now. M. DUMAS says that there are no literary men, who can be so-called, in any other country, and that France has long furnished both ideas and literature to the whole world. This is said flatly in so many words, and our literary men, or those we are accustomed to regard as such, can see the estimate put upon them by the author of "La Dame aux Camélias" and "La Princesse Georges." It may be imagined that M. DUMAS has reference to dramatic writers, in which case he would have a good show of reason for his bold assertion, but, unfortunately, he himself takes care to preclude that interpretation.

SARDOU'S NEW PLAY.

But "Rabagas," or the reign of the advocates, must take the first place in the events of the day. It is a satire of a very ancient model. Every page of this political satire, given in the form of a comedy, reminds us of ARISTOPHANES. Rabagas is GAMBETTA, or JULES FAVRE, or RICARD; say some, he is the modern CLEON; others assert, but all agree in saying, that the advocate of Monaco is a picture drawn from life. After all men have been pretty much the same in all stages of the world, as far as character is concerned, and I do not see why any one should be startled to find that ARISTOPHANES has given us a perfect picture of today, or that CLEON is a portrait of a class of men who have always existed and always may exist. CLEON was the Gambetta and Favre of ARISTOPHANE'S time, say 425 years before Christ, and served as a model, just as these well-known advocates have sat to SARDOU for the portrait of Rabagas. PLUTARCH, that shrewd observer of men and things, who kept a diary, has left us a small sketch of the Rabagas or Gambetta of those early days. "CLEON," he says, in effect, "without any regard for the decency of public meetings, was the first to give an example of shouting out with all his force, of throwing down his robe behind him, of striking violently upon his thigh, of walking up and down the tribune during his speech; and in that way he introduced among those who administered public affairs a license and contempt for all decorum which caused great disorder and confusion in the affairs of the Republic." It must be added, also, that CLEON set himself up for a General, and vaunted his own strategy. He was for war to the death, and, indeed, he did die like a soldier, under the walls of Amphipolis.

TOKENS OF SUCCESS.

There is the precedent for Rabagas in the hero of ARISTOPHANES and PLUTARCH, and for models, to give the picture a modern dress and air, sat the advocates of the 4th of September. One must confess that it requires uncommon talent to make the old Greek drama succeed at Paris—unless, indeed, we may argue from the success of the German Passion Play that our tastes are reverting to the old standard—but there can be no doubt that SARDOU has met with success. The first evidence of it was the attempt to mob the author, hiss down his play, and create a riot in the theatre. The second was in the deputation to M. THIERS, asking him to suppress the play because it was Bonapartist and offensive to the people. M. THIERS so far yielded to his own anger that he wrote an order of suspension, but he changed his mind after a meeting of the Council. If the people are offended by the political sentiments of the drama, let them stay at home, which Les Débats advises them to do. M. THIERS said, however, that the piece would be stopped if the disorders of the second night were repeated, and a large crowd went to the theatre for the purpose of repeating them. But the friends of SARDOU, or of BONAPARTE, or the lovers of fair-play, were too strong for these so-called Republicans, whose feelings had been injured by a satire, and they saw themselves in a dilemma where it was either silence, or a rapid and brusque journey down the stairs or out of the nearest window. A large force of Police were in and around the buildings, and dispatches were sent every five or ten minutes to the Chief of Police. Yet the petitions do not cease, and I am confident that the drama will soon be closed by public decree. All of the papers opposed to the Empire fall upon SARDOU in the most terrific manner. The magnificent JULES JANIN, who, since his entrance into the Academy, has assumed a lofty and patronizing style, says: "Go away, little man; we want none of your stale political lessons. You have no longer the art to amuse the people. We have given you your share of applause, and now you can step aside." Meantime the house is crowded every night, and a large number of young men, no friends of the family of Rabagas, go nightly to see the play for the purpose of joining in the free fight the Republicans (singular Republicans these) have threatened to raise.

ASHBY.

ENGLAND AND AMERICA.

Expressed Views of Chief-Justice Cockburn.

From the Boston Advertiser, Feb. 23.

The following extract is from a private letter of a gentleman now in London, giving a detailed account of a recent interview with Chief-Justice COCKBURN. The subject of the interview was, of course, the relations of Europe and the United States:

"I trust reason and common sense will prevail. Both England and America can only lose, and cannot possibly gain anything by a war. The United States have the exceptional opportunity of not only obtaining a large allowance covering every possible direct injury done by the Alabama and consorts, but have the chance by a wise use of their advantageous position in this controversy to establish themselves in the estimation of the world as a high-minded nation, affirming thereby their financial credit in the world, making it in time equal to the credit of England and Germany, and gaining character and enormous wealth by fifty years at least of undisturbed peace. All depends upon how this case is managed. The United States cannot possibly gain anything by a war, which would be a phantom of compensation for what they would lose in consequence of a war, even if human blood and human happiness counted for nothing."

MAYOR HALL AT THE BAR.

Five Jurors Obtained Yesterday, Making Eleven Altogether—The Examination.

The trial of Mayor HALL for misdemeanor was resumed yesterday morning before Judge DALY in the Court of Common Pleas, General Term. The prosecution was conducted by Messrs. Wheeler H. Peckham, Henry L. Clinton, Lyman Tremain and Algernon S. Sullivan, Assistant District-Attorney. The defendant was represented by Messrs. Ira Shaffer, Ex-Recorder Smith, Joel A. Fithian, Burrill, A. J. Vanderpool, E. W. Stoughton, and the Mayor himself. There were five additional jurors impaneled yesterday, and only one more remains to be sworn.

The names of William Monroe, James H. Hollmstead, Marks Corkowski, Charles Botts and Thornton M. Rodman, were first called. They were excused for having formed opinions on the merits of the case.

CHARLES A. KENTISH, of No. 618 Broadway, testified: I have formed no opinion on this case; I vote regularly, and was formerly Chairman of the Young Men's Democratic Committee; I don't know any members of the Ring, and have no prejudice against any of them; I don't know who composed the Tammany Ring; I read the papers regularly during the last election, but did not connect Mayor HALL'S name with the Ring; I heard the names of TWEED and SWEENY mentioned in connection with it; I have read of TWEED'S name in reference to the alleged peculations by the Board of Audit; I have seen in a certain paper the allegations made against President GRANT of receiving bribes and presents, but they did not make any impression on me.

Mr. STOUGHTON—This line of examination will descend into indecency.

Mr. CLINTON—I am happy to find that the mention of TWEED'S name has developed such a fine and lively sense of justice and propriety on the part of the counsel.

Mr. SHAFFER said that if Mr. CLINTON was imbued with the spirit which should always animate a public prosecutor he would not endeavor to prejudice the jury or the community against the Mayor.

Mr. CLINTON warmly repelled the attack made upon him by Mr. SHAFFER, disclaiming any intention of raising any prejudice against the Mayor, adding that his action and that of the other gentlemen associated with him had been in perfect harmony since the commencement of the trial.

Judge DALY interrupted the discussion, and on the case being referred to the triers the witness was rejected.

EMIL ROMER, merchant, residing in No. 55 East Eleventh-street, had read the statements against the Mayor and had expressed very decided opinions in reference to them. He was directed to stand aside. JAMES H. GROVESTEIN, of No. 347 West Twenty-seventh-street, stated that he read the articles in the TIMES in reference to Mayor HALL last Summer. They surprised him and created a very favorable impression in his mind. He was told to stand aside, as was also GEORGE A. COOKE for the same reason.

THE SEVENTH JUROR.

HORATIO REED, a slaughterer, doing business at the foot of Fortieth-street, had read the charges against the Mayor and said that if they were true his guilt was clear. He had some bias against the Mayor which would take evidence to remove. He would render an impartial verdict on the facts presented before him. Mr. REED was accepted on both sides and sworn in on the jury.

THE EIGHTH JUROR.

JAMES BARBOUR, formerly in the wholesale ale and liquor business, testified that he had read the general charges against the Mayor; these produced an impression on his mind to the prejudice of the Mayor, but they would not influence his judgment on the final issue; he had formed no opinion in regard to the present charge, and would be guided wholly by the evidence. The witness was accepted on both sides and impaneled on the jury.

SAMUEL H. CHOOKS had formed an opinion in the case and was rejected, as was also for a similar reason SIGISMUND KLENGENSTEIN, RANDALL W. ROBERTS, of No. 447 Broadway, testified he had not the slightest prejudice in reference to the charge against the Mayor, and was perfectly indifferent between him and the people. He was, however, challenged peremptorily by the defense.

THE NINTH JUROR.

JACOB S. HUTCHINGS, of No. 237 Lexington-avenue, stated that he had read the general charges against the City officials, but not against the Mayor particularly; had formed an opinion in regard to the conduct of the Ring officials, but had no prejudice against the Mayor in consequence; would be governed exclusively by the evidence presented in the case if taken on the jury. He was accepted.

THE TENTH JUROR.

WILLIAM ROBINSON had no prejudice against the Mayor, and had no interest in the result of this case. Had been connected with no political organization for twelve or fifteen years, and had no claims against the City, directly or indirectly; was not in any way interested in any one connected with the prosecution or defense. He was accepted.

NATHANIEL L. WYNNE had read the charges published against the Mayor in the TIMES, and had formed an opinion against him. That opinion still remained, and he did not know what it would take to remove it. Should want to see something to show it was not true to remove it. The triers found the challenge not true, and he was then challenged peremptorily.

LEWIS S. DAVIDSON, FRANKLIN GODWIN, HENRY M. ADAMS and BENJAMIN GITZKY were all excused having formed opinions. WM. FREY had expressed opinions in reference to the Mayor, but not very decidedly. It would take evidence, however, to remove them. Belonged to a Reform association prior to the last election and attended its meetings. He was rejected.

THE ELEVENTH JUROR.

WM. BLAIR, Jr., was sworn and accepted as the eleventh juror. He testified that he is a sailmaker, doing business at No. 102 Barclay-street, and has no opinions as to the Mayor's guilt. Albert A. Martin, De Lacy Loucks, Louis C. Murdock, Wm. H. Willetts, John Dick, Wm. B. Stote, Daniel Egan, Philip J. Rouk, Louis B. Silva, John J. Carle, John M. Crouch, James S. Blackwood, Michael J. Newman, John H. Vanerden, Jacob Fussell, Francis F. Fornell, Jacob Hendel, James Hunser, and James Price were rejected for having formed opinions.

JOHN BUTLER had formed no opinion whatever in regard to the charge against the Mayor.

To Mr. CLINTON—I was in the Croton Board under Mr. TWEED (great laughter.) Rejected.

Philip A. Rugen, Geo. Dunne, Joseph Monaghan, Jas. B. Davenport, Albert L. Smith, Horatio B. Van Syckle and Geo. W. Gibbons were also excused for having formed an opinion.

The Court then adjourned.

Reunion of the Theta Delta Chis.

A General Convention of the Theta Delta Chi fraternity is now in session in this City. The first meeting was held yesterday at the Astor House, when H. A. SMITH, presiding officer, F. P. BILLEYER, Secretary, and F. W. STEWART, Treasurer, and general executive officer. Delegates to the number of 200 were present from all the principal Charges in the country. The only business done was the reading of reports from the different Charges. Today another meeting will be held at the same place, commencing at the same time when officers for the ensuing year will be elected. This evening there will be a banquet at Delmonico's, at which Prof. P. MCCANDLISH, of Witham and Hatt College, will be the orator, LEWIS HALSING the poet, and A. G. HETHERINGTON the historian. It is probable that a third session will be held to-morrow. A number of the members went yesterday, were JOHN BROUGHAM, who will also be present at the banquet; Gen. WM. S. HEINTZ, Rev. MCWALTER B. MOORE, rector of St. Albans; Hon. WM. I. STONE, of the College Review; JOHN HAY, and J. W. GRIGGS, of Paterson, the orator, poet and historian of the occasion.

CONGRESSIONAL PROCEEDINGS.

SENATE....WASHINGTON, Wednesday, Feb. 28

Mr. COLE moved to take up the bill to lease to San Francisco a part of the Presidio Reservation for a public park. The bill was not taken up.

NORTH CAROLINA SENATORSHIP.

Mr. LOGAN, from the Committee on Privileges and Elections, reported adversely to the claim of JOSEPH P. ABBOTT to a seat as Senator from North Carolina. Mr. CARPENTER, for himself and Mr. RICE, made a minority report in favor of Mr. ABBOTT'S claim. Mr. LOGAN said he would call up the majority report at an early day. Mr. COLE announced that the Committee on Appropriations was ready to report several important bills requiring early action, and asked the Senate to sit today until the pending resolution was disposed of.

RESOLUTIONS, &c.

Mr. EDMUNDS offered a resolution requesting the Secretary of War to inform the Senate how many acres are in the Presidio Reservation, how much is needed for military purposes, and how much the remainder is worth. It was adopted. Mr. MORRILL, of Vermont, offered a resolution instructing the Committee on Printing to inquire whether some means cannot be found to diminish the bulk of the Congressional Globe. The resolution was adopted.

THE SALE OF ARMS.

At the expiration of the morning hour the Senate resumed the consideration of the Sumner resolution. Mr. STURNER addressed the Senate. He said: Besides the unaccustomed interest which this debate has excited, I cannot fail to note that it has wandered far from any original purpose of mine, and into fields which I have no desire to enter. I shall try to bring it back to the real issue, which I hope to present without passion or prejudice. And here, Sir, I declare, what is only the rule of my life, that is what I say today: there shall not be a single word which is not prompted by the love of truth and the desire for justice. But I venture to ask you to remember that there is something on this planet besides the Senate, or any Senator; something besides any which officials; something higher than any political party. I mean the good name of the American people and purity of Government, which must be saved from scandal. In this spirit and with this aspiration I speak today. Look first at the circumstances which surround us. An aroused community in the commercial Metropolis of the country has succeeded in overthrowing a corrupt Ring. Tammany has been at last overthrown; and here good Democrats vied with Republicans. The country, thrilled with the victory, demanded that it should be extended. Then came movements against the abuses in the service, and especially that which allowed the owners of the goods to store them in their own warehouses, and that it was broken up by a former Democratic Administration because it was found to make smuggling convenient! In conclusion, Mr. HARLAN argued against the passage of the pending resolution. Mr. SCHURZ said that in this debate Mr. HARLAN had won a peculiar distinction. All the other Senators on that side of the question who had spoken of the "General Order" abuses in New-York had contented themselves with trying to shift the responsibility for them, but he had undertaken to defend them. Mr. SCHURZ then remarked that the statement contained by Mr. HARLAN from the Secretary of War, today, contradicted the report of the Chief of Ordnance, and said: Now, it may be all so, but when we produce here a deliberate official report stating one thing, and then on the spur of the moment find another report brought in here stating another thing, it is evident, I think, that the ways of the Department are mysterious and we cannot finding out. And, therefore, I offer an amendment directing the Committee to inquire also whether breech-loading muskets, or other muskets capable of being transformed into breech-loaders have been sold by the War Department in such large numbers as seriously to affect the defensive capacity of the country in case of war. Mr. CARPENTER obtained the floor, but yielded for a motion to adjourn, and at 4½, without further action, the Senate adjourned.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

TREATY OF WASHINGTON.

Mr. HALE presented resolutions of the Maine Legislature declaring that the effect of the Treaty of Washington promises to be disastrous to the fishing interests of Maine, and instructing the Senators and Representatives from that State to use their influence to provide relief and indemnity to those interests by a bounty on fish, or on tonnage; or in such other forms as may best protect those interests. It was referred to the Committee on Commerce.

ARMS AND ORDNANCE SALES.

Mr. LYNCH asked leave to offer a resolution

Instructing the Committee on Expenditure in the War Department to investigate all sales of ordnance stores made by the Government for the year ending 30th June, 1871, and whether any member of the Senate or other citizen of the United States is, or has been, in communication or collusion with the Government or authorities of France, or with any agent thereof, with power to send for persons and papers, and to conduct the investigation in public.

Mr. DAWES said he should like before any member proposed an investigation into the conduct of a Senator to stand in his place and be responsible for some definite charge. Mr. LYNCH said he had no objection to striking that part out. Mr. DAWES did not think he set an example a good one. If the gentleman has any ground for suspecting the conduct of a Senator let him say so. Mr. HOOPER objected to the reception of the resolution.

BANKING AND CURRENCY.

The bill reported yesterday by Mr. MERRIAM from the Committee on Banking and Currency to facilitate bank clearing-house exchanges, came up as the first business in the morning hour. Mr. GARFIELD opposed the bill as indirectly producing an inflation of the currency. Mr. SCOFIELD also opposed it as carrying the legal-tender principle one step further than Congress had ever thought of before. Mr. POTTER agreed with Mr. GARFIELD. Mr. HOOPER suggested some amendments to the bill, which, he thought, would remove some of the objections to it. Mr. R. ROBERTS doubted the policy of the bill. Mr. SCOFIELD, Mr. CHITTENDEN and Mr. MONROE offered an amendment providing,

That the legal-tender deposit as security for the redemption of the certificates shall not be counted as part of the legal-tender reserve now required by law.

Mr. SHELDON moved to add New-Orleans to the places of deposit. The bill and amendments were, on the motion of Mr. SCOFIELD, recommitted to the Committee on Banking and Currency.

REPORTS AND RESOLUTIONS.

Mr. PERCE, from the Committee on Education and Labor, reported a bill to equalize the payment of male and female employés of the Government. Recommitted. Mr. TOWNSEND, of New-York, asked leave to offer preamble and resolution on the subject of consequential damage, submitting the question for final arbitrament to that distinguished statesman and philanthropist, JOHN BRIGHT, of England. Messrs. LAWRENCE and WM. A. ROBERTS objected. The House proceeded to the business on the Speaker's table, and disposed thereof as follows: The Senate amendments to the House bill for admission free of duty of photographs, &c., intended for exhibition at the Cleveland International Photographic Exhibition, was concurred in. It was the Senate amendment to the House bill for relief of the Postmaster of Chicago. The Senate bills transferring certain powers and duties to the Department of Justice, and providing a seal therefor; for relief of certain counties in Iowa, with an amendment; to reimburse United States soldiers for loss of clothing by the Chicago fire; for the sale of Hancock Barracks, at Hollis, Me., with an amendment; that amending the act of 27th July, 1868, relating to pensions, were passed. The bill to extend the time to the State of Wisconsin to complete a road from Lake St. Croix to Lake Superior, was taken up. After much debate by Messrs. HOLMAN, BANKS, RUSH, ELDRIDGE and BECK, and several votes by yeas and nays on intermediate questions and dilatory motions, the House, without reaching a final vote on the bill, adjourned at 5 o'clock.

The Baltimore Scandal—Card from Rev. Dr. Huston.

Rev. Dr. L. D. HUSTON, of Baltimore, against whom serious charges of immorality are made by a young girl of that city, is at present with his brother-in-law, at Avondale, Ohio, near Cincinnati. The papers of Cincinnati publish the following card from him:

Will the conductors of newspapers give me space to denounce as infamously false and slanderous, in every particular and in every sense, the shocking statement contained in a note which appeared in an evening journal of Baltimore about me, and to ask a suspension of public opinion till an investigation can be had? The loss of my voice, and the failing health of a member of my family, had determined me, weeks ago, to leave Baltimore.

CINCINNATI, Feb. 26, 1872.

The Market Savings Bank—Postponement of the Sale of the Bonds of the Derby Coal Company.

The Market Savings Bank was again opened, yesterday, for the purpose of allowing depositors to prove their claims. The bank will be open again for the same purpose on Saturday, the 2d of March. Twenty-two $1,000 bonds of the Derby Coal Company, of Pennsylvania, given by C. S. PATTERSON as security to the bank for a loan of $16,500, were attempted to be sold at auction, yesterday. At the hour announced for the sale a protest was entered by counsel on behalf of PATTERSON, and the sale was in consequence postponed until March 13. Mr. WORTH, the receiver, states that proceedings are now being instituted against the firm of HIRES & Co., for indebtedness to the bank, and also against Mr. BRIGHT, another alleged debtor. The Depositors' Investigating Committee held a meeting, yesterday, when many facts of importance were brought forth, which the Committee are not yet prepared to publish.

THE TRIAL OF THE GRAND JURY.

Continuation of the Broker Case Yesterday—Argument of Mr. Graham Against the Illegality of the Jury.

Every seat in the Court-room of the Oyer and Terminer was filled yesterday morning long before the beginning of the proceedings. At the opening of the Court, District-Attorney GARVIN submitted the advertisement and precept for the call of the Grand Jury, and the return, and said with that he rested his case.

Assistant Clerk STARKS, of the General Sessions, was called to produce the minutes of the Court of Oyer and Terminer for October, 1871, and proved that the Court was in session, under Justice GEORGE G. BARNARD, on Oct. 30, 1871, and also from Nov. 1 to Nov. 13.

Mr. GERRY said that the Circuit Court was also in session at the same time, under Justice BRADY, and consequently there must have been two Grand Juries.

Mr. JOHN GRAHAM then commenced his argument. He contended that the statute was mandatory and peremptory; that the Grand Jury list should be selected from the names on the list of the petit jurors for the time being; that the selection must be made by a board of six officers, under the act of 1853. He said the Grand Jury list from which had been obtained the Grand Jury that had indicted Mr. STOKES had not been selected by such a board, but by the Mayor, who did the whole business, while three others sat by and merely acquiesced in what he did. The statute prescribed that the Board should meet in the office of the Commissioner of Jurors on the first Monday in September. The Board did meet on the first Monday in September, 1871, but transacted no business. The statute further prescribed that a Chairman should be elected and that four should form a quorum. If a quorum was not present, the Board should not enter upon its duties, but adjourn from time to time until a quorum should be obtained. He understood this passage to mean that three persons should be actually and actively engaged in the duties, and not that one man should make a selection for others to abide by. The Commissioner of Jurors, according to the statute, if able to attend, was to act as clerk, and to produce all the lists of jurors in his possession, from which the selection was to be made. The Board was then to select not less than 600 nor more than 1,000 names from which the Grand Jury were to be impaneled. The counsel then went on to explain the meaning of the words "to select." The persons to be selected, according to the statute, were to be intelligent citizens, and, it is to be assumed, sober ones. He called the attention of the Court to one of the Grand Jury who had been under examination the previous day, and asked if he was an example of a sober citizen. The statute further required that each selected juror should be of good character, and should have the qualification of serving as a petit juror, and not exempt from serving as such. The majority of the quorum, the statute said, had to agree upon every name selected to go on the Grand Jury list, which he understood did not mean mere acquiescence. He compared the action of the Board to a case referred to three Judges at Special Term, and asked what would be the effect if two went to sleep and left all the work to only one. If one member of the Board selected the list and the others adopted it without expressed concurrence, the list was not properly made up according to the statute. Then, assuming that the list was properly made up, it was still illegal, as it had not on it the given and surname of each person at length, with their residences and occupations, as required by the law. The list should also have been signed by the officers composing the Board, certified to by the Clerk of the Board, and filed in the office of the County Clerk ten days. Such a course had not been followed. In all this the statute was absolute, and if the Court could wipe out one part of the statute, it could as easily discharge the prisoner, STOKES, without a trial. The statute defines that the Commissioner of Jurors must select the Grand Jury; and if the Grand Jury that indicted STOKES had been selected by the Deputy Clerk, or by any one other way than by the Commissioner of Jurors, it was null and void. Even if he did not personally draw the names from the Grand Jury box, the Commissioner must be present, directing and overseeing the proceedings. It had become well known that favoritism had been shown in the selection of Grand Jurors, and such was the amount and extent of impurity in this as in other departments as to defeat the ends of justice itself. One man could gain an entrance into the sacred chamber of the Grand Jury by merely sending in his card, while another who had a duty to perform was excluded. He then cited the case of FRIERY vs. The People, where the list was informally prepared, and although held to be a proper list, was reprobated by Justice WRIGHT on account of its informality. In this case the counsel attacked the list itself, and asserted that any Grand Jury drawn from it was not a legal body.

It has been argued that as this is a case in which it is to be decided whether or not STOKES killed FISK, it does not matter who indicts him. The law has said in which way the issue is to be tried, and no other way will do. The Constitution declares that no man shall be deprived of life, liberty or property without due process of law, and the statute law must therefore be obeyed. In this case the Constitution has been disregarded, and the statute law disobeyed. Such a course would not be allowed in an assessment case, and if there was a need of so much scrutiny in matters of property, it was much more so when a man's life was at stake. The counsel asserted that the indictment had been drawn without consultation with the District-Attorney, and without any other evidence than had been produced before the Coroner's jury, who had entirely thrown out in their verdict all allegations of premeditation or malice, which allegations the Grand Jury had so ingeniously interwoven into the indictment.

The Press had asserted that if this plea was allowed all the prisoners in the State Prison would be discharged. Such would not be the case. The prisoner STOKES had raised the objection as to the legality of the tribunal before he pleaded to the indictment. Those who were in prison had pleaded to the indictments as presented. That action alone debarred them from seeking the remedy his client claims. This was decided in the People vs. ALLEN, 43 New-York, 28. The counsel then cited the acts of 1847, 1853 and 1870 for the selection of Grand Jurors. By the act of 1870 the ballot for Grand Jurors is to be prepared by the Commissioner of Jurors, carefully compared with the list regularly selected, placed by him in the Grand Jury box, from which the Commissioner shall draw fifty names. Counsel contended that on this point alone the Grand Jury was illegal. They had been told to think of the consequence of his argument. Let the consequences be on the heads of those who had acted illegally; he wanted the law administered as on the statute book. He contended further that the Board had no jurisdiction in selecting the Grand Jury list, not having before them the list of petit jurors called for by the act of 1853. The petit jury list should have been the one in force from Oct. 1, 1870, to Sept. 30, 1871, whereas the Grand Jury list chosen in September, 1871, was selected from a list beginning to be in force on Oct. 1, 1871, and not even certified to. Fifteen names on the Grand Jury list could not be found on the list of petit jurors. He cited the case of CLARK vs. The State of Maryland, where, in 1868, the list was made out by the Clerk, and presented separately to the Judges, which composed the Board, for their signatures. It was there decided by Judge STEWART that the Grand Jury had been improperly drawn, and the indictment for murder was quashed. It being decreed that the statute was mandatory and not directory. It is shown that the Mayor got up this Grand Jury list, while three figures bowed the head to what he did, and consequently the drawing could not be legal. He also cited the case of the People against JEWETT, who was accused of abducting MORGAN during the anti-Masonic troubles. In this case the supervisors selected the Grand Jury, carefully excluding all who were Masons, and it was held that such exclusion was contrary to law. In the case of The State of Louisiana against PARKS, for murder, it was shown that a new trial was ordered because one juryman had been improperly selected—he not being at the time a citizen—whereas in this case, the counsel contended, fifteen had been improperly selected. He showed by the case of The People against ALLEN, (43 New-York, 28,) where the convicted prisoner endeavored to escape by the plea that two Grand Juries had been in session, Judge ANDREWS decided that if the plea had been interposed at the proper time it would have been valid; but after the verdict had been rendered the Court could not allow the plea, he said, would have to do away with the cry that the consequences of his client's plea would be to release all the prisoners in the State Prison. He contended further that the Grand Jury list was illegal, for if three men would bow acquiescence to what the Mayor suggested, then the Mayor might bow to what any one outside should suggest. The list was void for want of the certificate, and could never be made valid. Had it been certified to, it would, perhaps, have been difficult to have disputed it, as it would have then become a record. Mr. GRAHAM wound up his argument by an appeal to the Court on behalf of his client, who, he said, perhaps, would in time be able to show that the fate of DORMAN B. EATON and young RAMSAY might have been his.

The Court then adjourned to 11 o'clock today.

A New Phase of the Saw-Dust Swindle—One of the Gang Sent to the Penitentiary.

EDWARD NICHOLSON, a merchant of De Sark, Arkansas, when walking up Broadway yesterday afternoon, was accosted by an elegant young man, who, seeming to recognize him, asked if he had not received a circular from ANDERSON & Co. Mr. NICHOLSON said he had not, and, asking what the circular was, was regaled with the old story of the first engraver of the Treasury having been discharged without cause, and having in revenge engraved plates of the greenbacks, from which ANDERSON & Co. were prepared to sell money, as good as genuine, for forty-five cents on the dollar. Mr. NICHOLSON pretended to be delighted at the prospect of this speculation, and on the invitation the young man walked beside him discussing the affair quite glibly until Officer GILSON, of the Broadway Squad, was encountered, when the young man, to his great astonishment and disgust, was given into custody as a swindler. Being arraigned before Justice HOGAN, at the Tombs Police Court, he was annoyed to find upon giving his name as JOSEPH ANDERSON that he was committed for six months to Blackwell's Island.

BOARD OF HEALTH.

Report on the Condition of the Street-Cars—The Measure Nuisance Again—Weekly Statistics.

At the session of the Board of Health, yesterday, Dr. MORRAU MORRIS, City Sanitary Inspector, made a report as to the condition of the street-cars. It is stated that the cushioned seats and backs are not and cannot be kept in a cleanly condition, and, as a rule, the means of ventilation are inadequate and badly managed, but the offensive condition of the cars, is, as a rule, more owing to overcrowding and to the class of people who ride in them; this is shown in the report of Inspector JAMES, who contrasts the class who use the cars traversing the central portion of the City with those who ride in the cars on the edges of the City, the latter being largely laborers and mechanics, who leave their work in a dirty state. In specifying the condition of the cars of the different lines, the Ninth-avenue Company's cars are said to have dirty and greasy cushions and filthy straw, the latter not being changed oftener than once per week, and in seventeen cars the ventilation was defective. In the Forty-second and Grand-street line the straw was found in a filthy condition, and those having cushioned backs were in a foul state. The Eighth-avenue line cars were generally in good order, but the Tenth-avenue had worn and filthy cushions. The Fourth and Sixth avenue cars were in excellent order, no straw being used on either line; and the cars of the Avenue C line, being all new, are yet in good order. From the facts which have been gathered by the inspection, the report concludes that the principal causes of uncleanliness are the cushioned seats and the use of straw on the floors. The ventilation of cars must be materially improved and placed beyond the caprice of passengers or conductors to render these vehicles healthful. The report was referred to the Sanitary Committee.

Upon motion of Commissioner MANIERRE, it was ordered that the Controller be requested to place $20,000 to the credit of the Board in the National Shoe and Leather Bank to pay the expenses of the Board for February.

President ROBERTS stated that in consequence of the approach of warm weather, and the expected advent of cholera, the Board owed it to the public to remove all manure dumps from the City, and he had requested Dr. MORRIS, City Sanitary Inspector, to make a special inspection of the dumping grounds and report the condition. This report is now being read and merely stated that there were large accumulations of manure on the grounds at Forty-fifth-street, East River, and Thirty-eighth-street, North River, there being at the latter place 20,000 loads, and at the first the manure being from ten to twenty feet deep, and recommended that the contractors be required to remove all the manure by the 1st of May.

A discussion ensued, in which it appeared that, although the Board had ordered all this manure to be removed before Dec. 1, and none dumped on the ground after that day, these contractors did not remove any of it, and have constantly dumped at both these places, as well as at other points. This order was in the form of a resolution, and could not be enforced, and it was ordered that an order in the form prescribed by sec. 14 be entered, requiring all this manure to be removed before the 1st of April.

Dr. MORRIS made the following comparative statement of contagious diseases reported for the two weeks ending Feb. 17 and 24, 1872:

Feb. 17—Typhus fever, 1; typhoid fever, 8; scarlet fever, 103; measles, 16; diphtheria, 17; small-pox, 81.

Feb. 24—Typhus fever, 2; typhoid fever, 5; scarlet fever, 86; measles, 20; diphtheria, 19; small-pox, 73.

Dr. RUSSELL, Register of Records, reports as follows: During the past week there were registered 621 deaths, being an increase of 60 upon the previous week, and an excess of 107 over the corresponding week of 1871. Zymotic diseases produced 157 deaths; constitutional, 162; local, 234; developmental, 67, and violent causes 37. The fatal cases of small-pox diminished from 25 to 24; of scarlatina, from 30 to 29; of whooping-cough, from 29 to 17.

Suit for Breach of Promise against "Brick" Pomeroy.

The answer to the complaint of SADIE E. WILKINSON, of New-Haven, Conn., for breach of promise of marriage against MARK M. POMEROY, was filed in the Clerk's office of the United States District Court yesterday. The defendant denies that he ever at any time or in any manner solicited the plaintiff in marriage, and that the plaintiff was unmarried at the time when she avers he promised to marry her. The defendant further alleges that at the times aforesaid he was a married man, and incapable of entering into a marriage contract, and that this the plaintiff well knew; and he further says, that at the aforesaid times, "the plaintiff was habitually intemperate, and of a violent disposition and temper, and generally resented the advances of neighbors so to be, of which the defendant was ignorant at that time. That on divers occasions afterward the plaintiff threatened personal violence to defendant, and with a pistol and other dangerous weapons pursued defendant from time to time and place to place, so that he greatly feared that his life was in danger; and that the conduct, habits and disposition and temper of the plaintiff were such, as he has learned since the times in said complaint mentioned, that she was not a fit person to enter into the marriage contract with any person." And, in answer to the allegation of the plaintiff, that by reason of the alleged promise of the defendant to marry her, she was prevented from receiving the attentions of other persons with a view to marriage, the defendant says that if said plaintiff has not received such attentions it was in consequence of her intemperate habits and her ungovernable and violent temper and disposition, which render her unfit to enter into a marriage contract with any person or persons whatsoever. By the sworn statement of POMEROY'S counsel it appears that he is now in the West, and when last heard from was in Kansas.

The New Russian Minister.

It has already been announced in the TIMES that BARON VON OFFENBERG has been appointed by PRINCE GORTSCHAKOFF to take charge of the Russian Legation at Washington. Advices were received in this City yesterday stating that the new Minister had left St. Petersburg on the 12th of February, and, it is expected, will reach this country about the middle of March. Baron VON OFFENBERG has for many years had charge of the interests of the Imperial Government in the Legation at the Court of Bucharest, Persia. He is accompanied by Count KREUTZ, a young Russian nobleman, who has recently been appointed an attaché to the Legation. M. SCHIRKOFF, second Secretary of the Embassy, who has been acting as Chargé d'Affaires since the retirement Major-Gen. GORLOFF from that office, succeeds Count KREUTZ, the first Secretary, who has obtained permission to visit Russia, and will probably not return.

The Hudson-Street Dummy Engine Accident—The Railroad Company Censured.

An inquest was held by Coroner YOUNG, yesterday, in the case of Mrs. ANN BROWN, of No. 213 Montgomery-street, Jersey City, who was run over and instantly killed in Hudson-street, near Desbrosses-street, on the 19th inst., by a dummy engine of the Hudson River Railroad, in charge of WILLIAM M. DUNHAM, engineer. The jury exonerated the engineer, but censured the Railroad Company for allowing the cars to remain on the track so as to obstruct the view of persons crossing Hudson-street, and they added: "We therefore hold the Company directly responsible for her death." It is said that the relatives of deceased intend to bring suit against the Company.

WEDNESDAY, Feb. 28—P. M.

The Money market in Wall-street works close today, without any attempt, as far as we can discover, to increase the stringency growing out of the position of the City Banks. As a rule the Banks are poor in lawful Money, beyond the required 25 per cent. to their Deposits and Circulation, and many of them are now below this line, and liable at any time to be overhauled by the National Bank Examiner. The mercantile demand upon them is fortunately not of a very pressing nature, although an active Spring business now before the Merchants may require further accommodation later in the season. The scarcity of Money, today, has more or less affected the other Wall-street markets. The price of Gold and rates of Exchange are comparatively weak, and the Public Funds ¼@½ ₱ cent. lower on most of the 5-20s. The sales of Gold are 116¼@116⅜ ₱ cent., and of Bills on London, 60 days, 109½ @109¾ ₱ cent., less a brokerage.

The Stock Brokers paid 7 ₱ cent. Interest, and in some cases a small commission to the lender, for the use of Money to carry over their Railroad and other Stocks, and as it seemed every way probable that the stringency results from legitimate causes, and from no "lock up" of Greenbacks, the allied Bull movement on the Exchange, to which reference was made yesterday, was somewhat discouraged at and after the Second Board. The "outside public" have become more than suspicious of the leadership of Mr. DREW and the Erie Ring, whether acting against each other, as they sometimes do, or by preconcert together, as at present: and it may require the development of increased traffic on the great Railway lines as the season advances and the restoration of easy Money, both of which are hoped for, is not expected, before the end of March, to encourage a substantial "Spring rise" on the Stock Exchange. At the same time, it is well to remember, as Wall-street so often acts not only by impulse, but by contraries, that there is no safe reasoning from business or financial causes that ought to influence the market. In the Tennessee Bonds there was a large business at 67 ₱ cent. The South Carolinas were steadier than yesterday; sales in the Afternoon at 30½@30⅜ ₱ cent. The Railway Mortgages were generally steady.

After the Second Board, the business in Stocks in the Hall of the Exchange was comparatively dull, but without much change in the quotations from the Board sales. The Gold and Exchange markets were also dull, and the Public Funds barely steady. The Customs demand for Gold today was very light, less than $300,000.

Our young friend of the Money column of the Herald, who, we believe, is a native of the Green Isle, thus discourses of the supposed sympathies of the Stock Exchange for St. Patrick's Day and its associations.

"Out of respect to the numerous citizens of Celtic birth or descent, members of the Board are interested in its dealings from day to day, and as a testimonial of regard for the immense Celtic contributions to the railway wealth of the country, it has been decided to close the Stock Exchange on Patrick's Day, the 17th of March proximo. This determination was not arrived at by any special resolutions or action of the Board, but was agreed upon informally among the members, and will be adhered to none the less strictly. It will be remembered that last year the legislature proposed making the 17th of March a holiday legally. This year the Stock Exchange will render it one practically. It is thought that the banks, the Custom-house and public buildings generally will unite with the Stock Exchange in this decorous compliment to our Hibernian fellow-citizens."

All of which would be exceedingly fine if St. Patrick's Day had not chanced to fall this year upon Sunday!

The attention of the holders of the First Mortgage Bonds of the Des Moines Valley Railroad is called to an advertisement which appears elsewhere in this paper.

BANKING AND FINANCIAL.

☞ JAY COOKE & CO.

Are now offering the 7.30 Northern Pacific Gold Bonds at par and accrued interest in currency. With their ample security and high rate of interest, we believe there is no investment accessible to the people which is more profitable or safe. All marketable securities received in exchange at their highest cash value. Holders of Five-twenties and all desiring to invest in reliable bonds will receive full particulars on application to banks and bankers throughout the country, or to

JAY COOKE & CO.,

New-York, Philadelphia and Washington.

☞ ST. JOSEPH AND DENVER CITY RAILROAD COMPANY'S FIRST MORTGAGE SINKING FUND LAND GRANT BONDS,

BEARING EIGHT PER CENT. (8 p. c.) INTEREST, PAYABLE IN GOLD, FREE OF TAX,

AND IN DENOMINATIONS OF $1,000, $500 AND $100, can be obtained from the undersigned, or through the principal banks and bankers throughout the United States.

The attractive features of these securities are recognized in the fact that, although they have been but a short time on the market, they are nearly all absorbed, and but a small amount are now for sale.

They combine a perfect security with a liberal rate of interest. This interest account is made light for, and easily borne by, the Company, through the operation of the Sinking Fund created from sales of the Company's land, which, in many cases, draw interest at the rate of ten (10) per cent. per annum. The security behind them is ample in every particular, as they constitute a first and only mortgage on a trunk line of railroad which will soon connect the City of St. Joseph, Mo., (an important railway centre,) with the Union Pacific Railroad at Fort Kearney, materially shortening the distance between the Atlantic and Pacific coasts. In addition to this, the bonds have further security in the fact that there is included in the Mortgage the Company's magnificent Lands, amounting to 1,500,000 acres, known to be among the best in the United States. The Mortgage Indenture prohibits the sale of these Lands at less than Four (4) Dollars per acre, and payable to the Trustees under the Mortgage, for the clear and express purpose of retiring these Bonds. The amount thus realized exceeds the entire amount of Bonds which can be issued, and leaves the road, property and franchises free.

The Bonds have thirty years to run, with interest at Eight per Cent., free of tax, payable in February and August in each year.

Both principal and interest are payable in gold.

The principal in New-York. The interest in either New-York, London or Frankfort-on-the Main, at the option of the holder, without notice, and in the gold currency of the country in which they are presented. They are coupons or registered.

Trustees—Farmers' Loan and Trust Company.

The present price of these Bonds is 97½ and accrued interest in currency, from Aug. 15, 1871. But they are receivable at par and accrued interest in payment for lands sold by the Company. The right is reserved to advance the present selling price without notice.

Maps, circulars, documents and full information furnished on application.

Though acting as agents for the sale of this loan, our firm buy and sell in their regular business the Bonds of the St. Joseph and Denver City Railroad Company, those of the Eastern Division eight per cent. (8s.) recently placed by us at 97½, being now quoted at from 101½ to 102½ and accrued interest.

TANNER & CO.,
Bankers, No. 11 Wall-st.

☞ LAND GRANT BONDS.—By an article recently published in regard to the sales of lands by some twenty-five of the principal land grant railroad companies of the United States, it will be found that the actual price realized per acre varies from $3 07 to $13 98, and that at the head of this list stands the lands of the GRAND RAPIDS AND INDIANA RAILROAD, running from Fort Wayne, in Indiana, northerly through the State of Michigan. The same statement shows that the lands of this Company are selling at the rate of $50,967 50 per mile of road, and the issue of bonds being but at the rate of $25,000 per mile, are thus secured not only by a first mortgage on the road, but by double the amount in lands. It is therefore apparent to investors that the security of these bonds is beyond question, as the proceeds of the lands are invested in the repurchase of the bonds. The cause of the high prices of these lands is that they are valuable lumber lands, and situated so near to the consumptive population of the country, being within 600 miles of New-York City.

The bonds have 30 years to run, principal and interest, (7 per cent.,) payable in gold in New-York; coupons or registered, payable April and October, free of tax. But a small portion of the issue remains unsold. Price, 96 per cent. and accrued interest. For sale by

WINSLOW, LANIER & CO.,
No. 27 Pine-st.

☞ Investors who are in search of a perfectly safe and highly profitable security, which can be obtained at a reasonable price, would do well to examine the claims of the First Mortgage 7 Per Cent. Land Grant Gold Bonds of the West Wisconsin Railway. These Bonds have only fifteen years to run, and are secured by a railroad already in successful operation, and by a land grant of 1,000,000 acres. Sold at 92½ and accrued interest in currency by WHITE, MORRIS & CO., No. 18 Wall-st., and GWYNNE, JOHNSTON & DAY, No. 16 Wall-st., who will furnish pamphlets and particulars.

☞ THE COUPONS OF THE INCOME BONDS of the Union Pacific Railroad due March 1 will be paid on and after that date at the office of the Company in Boston, and at the banking-house of Morton, Bliss & Co., New-York.

E. H. ROLLINS, Treasurer.

☞ BURLINGTON, CEDAR RAPIDS AND Minnesota Seven per Cent. Gold sinking Fund Bonds for sale at 92½ and interest by HENRY CLEWS & CO., No. 32 Wall-st., New-York.

UNITED STATES SUPREME COURT.

No. 93.—Scoors et al. vs. Steamer Scotia.—Appeal from the Circuit Court for the Southern District of New-York. The appellants, owners of the American ship Berkshire, and on behalf of the owners of her cargo, filed the libel in this case to recover for the loss of the vessel and cargo, sunk in mid ocean by collision with the British steam-ship Scotia. The defense of the Scotia was that the Berkshire had changed her course, when by keeping it the collision would have been avoided, and that she did not exhibit the colored lights required by law. The District Court found that the Berkshire had changed her course before her light was discovered by the Scotia, and that, there being no subsequent change of course, the change was not to be deemed a fault on the part of that vessel; but held that, in view of certain British orders, and of certain municipal laws of numerous maritime States, concurring upon the point of side-lights and fog signals the laws of the sea must be deemed to be changed in respect of such requirements, so that, at the time of the collision, it was obligatory upon the Berkshire to exhibit colored lights, and that the failure to exhibit them was the cause of the collision. The Circuit Court, although coming to the conclusion that aside from the neglect to carry side-lights the Berkshire was at fault and the Scotia free from fault, affirmed the decree on the question of lights, holding that under the act of 1864, the same regulation is prescribed and that it is to be enforced in the case of a collision on the high seas, outside the jurisdiction of any nation, even when the suit is between our citizens and citizens of a foreign State. The correctness of this decision is here contested.

No. 118.—Joseph H. Bradley vs. George P. Fisher.—Error to the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia.—This is the case of Mr. Bradley, Sr., against Judge FISHER, to recover damages for the injury sustained by Mr. Bradley, by reason of Judge FISHER'S action in striking his name from the roll of attorneys of the Court, and the particulars of which will be well remembered. Mr. Bradley, during the trial of the Surratt case, in which he was counsel for Surratt, after the adjournment of the Court, approached Judge FISHER, and complaining that the latter had insulted him while on the bench, threatened personal chastisement. The next day, for this offense, Judge FISHER ordered his name to be stricken from the roll of attorneys. The questions presented by the case were, whether Judge FISHER could maintain an objection to the Court by Mr. Bradley's seats, the Court before it journed previous to the occurrence, and whether he could be sued for any act done in his judicial capacity, such as the order made. It was decided below that the act of Mr. Bradley was such an act of disrespect to the Court as justified the order made, and that he was not liable in damages for the same. This ruling is presented as error in this Court.

Mr. Bradley, in person, for plaintiff in error; Messrs. Cook and Riddle for defendant.

No. 18.—The United States vs. Silvey.—Appeal from the Court of Claims. This was an action to recover the proceeds of seventy-seven bales of cotton, 77,000 pounds, the Government forces at Atlanta, Ga. The claimant established to the satisfaction of the Court of Claims that he never gave aid and comfort to the rebellion, and was allowed to recover, the Court finding that he was the owner of the property and that it had been captured under the captured and Abandoned Property Act. The proceeds had been paid into the Treasury. It is here claimed by the Government that as the act requires a book to be kept by the Secretary in which the proceeds of all such property paid into the Treasury shall be entered, and as there is no entry of the receipts of the proceeds of the property in this case, the absence of the entry is evidence that no such proceeds were paid into the Treasury. This book of accounts, it is urged, should have been received as the best evidence on the subject, and the finding should have been that there had been no payment into the Treasury, in which case there could have been no recovery. It is also urged that as the act entitles the Court of Claims to give judgment only for the proceeds of property which have paid into the Treasury, in the absence of the evidence of the entry contended for as to what the proceeds are, the Court has no data upon which to enter judgment. It has no power to render a pro tanto judgment, as was done in this case.

UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT.

IN BANKRUPTCY.

Before Judge Blatchford.

In the matter of Jacob Shaffer, bankrupt.—This case was referred to a register, and Joseph M. Lippincott appointed assignee of the estate. Shortly after his appointment he absconded from the City The creditors thereupon petitioned the register to call a meeting of creditors for the removal of Lippincott and the appointment of another assignee. The meeting was called accordingly, and John Romain elected in place of Lippincott. On the final report of these proceedings coming before Judge BLATCHFORD for approval, he decides that the register had no power to call such a meeting; that the notice to creditors calling it was irregular, in not being given by a letter signed by the Clerk of the Court, and that the paper signed by the creditors should state that it was signed by a majority of all the creditors of the bankrupt, whereas it stated only that it was signed by a majority present at the meeting. Nevertheless, as the register certifies that a majority of all the creditors was actually present at the meeting and signed the paper, and made choice of Mr. Romain in place of Lippincott, the Court consented to the arrangement.

COMMON PLEAS—GENERAL TERM—FEB. 28.

NOTICE TO THE BAR.

In consequence of the engagements of Chief Justice DALY, this branch of the Court stands adjourned until the second Monday of March, (the 11th.)

DAILY, WEEKLY AND SEMI-WEEKLY.

This journal is now thoroughly identified with the greatest political necessity of the hour—uncompromising warfare against all forms of corruption, whether in national or local government. For years past the TIMES has been exposing the demoralising schemes of self-interested politicians, and its recent warfare upon the Tammany Democrats has been received with universal approval. It has adhered to the pledge given in its original prospectus, more than twenty years ago, that the public should be truly represented, and their interests faithfully guarded through its columns. Its record has been pure and honorable, and the highest aim of its proprietors is to render it more and more worthy of its past history, and of the confidence which the public repose in it. Two out of three of the original proprietors still direct its policy, and guide it on all public questions. They purpose that the TIMES shall continue to keep clear of all narrow and unworthy influences and cliques, and aim to represent the great body of the public, as distinguished from personal factions. It occupies a perfectly independent position, and is free to speak the truth on all subjects and about all men. Its greatly increased circulation throughout the country adds to its power and influence. It will continue to be a faithful exponent of Republican principles, and advocate with untiring energy every cause which tends to further the welfare of the people.

The utmost care will be devoted to gathering political news from special sources during the Presidential canvass. This department of the paper will be unusually full and trustworthy. Renewed enterprise will be exhibited in every department of the paper, and large space will be devoted to reports of speeches made during elections, or on other important political occasions.

A very full summary of news, and many general articles of great interest, are published in the Semi-weekly editions; and in the Weekly edition there is an unabridged report of the proceedings at the Farmers' Club, an excellent summary of political information, and a great variety of matter suitable for family reading.

The NEW-YORK TIMES is pre-eminently a family paper, all objectionable advertisements being rigidly excluded; and it has a constantly increasing circulation among the most respectable classes of the community.

The whole story about the "French arms" discussion in the Senate has been very cleverly put into a picture by Mr. NAST, in the new number of Harper's Weekly. There is Mr. SUMNER sitting at a table, with the well-deserved honors of a lifetime around him. Over him leans SCHURZ, as Mephistopheles, inciting him to draw up his famous set of resolutions, designed to prove that the United States were guilty of a flagrant breach of neutrality during the war between Germany and France. Behind SCHURZ is a placard, on which is written: 'Wanted, new plans for breaking down the Administration. Wanted, plans to stir up bad feeling between European Powers and the United States. Let us have investigations." The likeness of SCHURZ is excellent—and the part in which he is portrayed exactly suits his character. It is very seldom that an artist can so happily hit off the physical and moral qualities of a man at one stroke.

The Tribune says:

"We want to know through whose fault it was that a Pay-master stationed in the Federal city, under the very eye of the Treasury officers, Paymaster-General, &c., could draw $474,000 from the Treasury, $40,000 at a lick, on his own checks payable to bearer, and gamble it away before his guilty career was arrested."

We want to know whether it is true that after a certain Postmaster detected one of his responsible subordinates committing a State's Prison offense, by depositing several hundred thousand dollars with a broker, instead of in the Subtreasury, he still continued this subordinate in his position for a year or more, until he was compelled to remove him because it was discovered that he had stolen a hundred thousand or more—and whether HORACE GREELEY was one of the bondsmen of that Postmaster, and whether he has not only failed to pay up the deficiency, but has intervened to secure the retention of the postmaster in office.

In these busy days, people do not always read the speeches of public men, but we trust the selections we make today from a very able speech of Senator WILSON'S will receive the careful attention of our readers. These extracts recall many important facts, which are sometimes forgotten in the din of slander which Republicans are now raising about their own party, and they may, perhaps, cause the intelligent reader to reflect once more on the work which the Republican Party has done, and to look at the career of the President as it really is, and not as it presents itself refracted through the medium of rival candidates and disappointed office-seekers. Senator WILSON'S words are worthy of all the thought which our readers can give to them.

The majority of the Assembly Committee on Privileges and Elections have submitted their report on the contested seat case of the Fifteenth City District. The attention of the Committee was chiefly directed to the returns from the twenty-fifth election district of the Twentieth Ward. They found that while the canvassers of the vote for Assemblyman in that district returned 228 votes for ALEX. FREAR, and only 60 for FREDERICK KILLIAN, the latter actually received 98 votes. Ninety-one of these voters came forward personally and testified to the fact of having voted for Mr. KILLIAN. The returns of the district being accordingly thrown out, the total vote of the Assembly district, instead of showing a majority of 27 for FREAR, shows a majority of 141 for KILLIAN, whom six members of the Committee, accordingly, declare to be entitled to the seat. Even were the returns of the Twenty-fifth Election District to be retained, only with the true number of KILLIAN'S vote restored, his majority over FREAR would be 49, and he would, equally, be entitled to the seat. Messrs. HILL and MOSELEY are to submit a minority report, and the question will come up as a special order in the Assembly on Friday next.

Mr. GREELEY recently dwelt in his usual mild manner on the impropriety of editors becoming candidates for office. There is a great deal of force in what he said, especially as applied to HORACE GREELEY. That eminent journalist is a candidate for the Presidency, and went on a stumping tour in the South, last year, for the purpose of making smooth his path in that part of the country. In the North, he is working for himself by endeavoring to destroy public confidence in Gen. GRANT. As a candidate for the office which Gen. GRANT holds, Mr. GREELEY finds the President very much in his way. All his criticisms upon the President are the criticisms of a man who wishes to displace a rival. It is not surprising, therefore, that even the most simple-minded readers of the Tribune attach very little weight to what it says about Gen. GRANT.

Party Spirit in Local Politics.

It is very much to be regretted that the passage of the Committee of Seventy's charter in the Assembly should have been effected by so near an approach to a strict party vote. If the popular uprising in November last meant anything at all, it meant that the citizens of New-York had resolved that in municipal politics, henceforth, the contest should be, not between Republicans and Democrats, but between honest men and rogues. The Committee of Seventy made a perfectly impartial selection of the candidates on their ticket from the ranks of both political parties. The Committee itself is composed of Republicans and Democrats in almost equal proportion, and its present energetic Chairman is at once an enthusiastic Reformer and a life-long Democrat. The charter which has been the result of the long and earnest deliberations of the Committee has never been attacked on the ground of being framed in a partisan spirit. It recognizes no political divisions in City affairs, just as the people declared that there must be none in November last. It aims at making the Municipal Government of New-York a true reflection of its voting population, and there it ends.

Yet, in spite of such considerations, we find Tammany Democrats and Reform Democrats agreeing to sink their differences for the purpose of voting against the unpartisan Charter of the Committee of Seventy, and taking special pains to have it understood that the responsibility of passing such a measure must rest with the Republican Party. It was clearly no common impulse that ranged SAMUEL J. TILDEN and TOM FIELDS on the same side, and it bodes very ill for the good government of the City if the tactics of Tuesday evening are to be repeated before and at the April election. Mr. TILDEN did, indeed, give the assurance that if the bill became law, nobody would do more to aid in its practical working than he. But then, Mr. TILDEN also took great pains to show that the triumph of the Republican State ticket in November, was largely due to Democratic votes. What relevancy this had to the question under discussion it is somewhat difficult to see, unless it were to show that Democrats had a partisan rôle to play in future municipal elections, altogether apart from their interests in common with other citizens.

TOM FIELDS went still further, and with his usual insolent braggadocio, boasted that under the charter, the Democrats would roll up an immense vote, and fill all the local offices. Setting aside the absurdity of a partisan victory on an issue into which politics will not enter, the citizens of New-York will be perfectly contented to see Democratic heads of departments, provided they are honest and capable men. If we are to have the City Government manned by such officials as ANDREW H. GREEN, it will be an unmixed blessing for the community. If TOM FIELDS and his friends are to have a hand in it, we shall merely have the trouble of doing the work of reform over again. It is to be hoped that more pressing engagements at Sing Sing may be found to occupy the attention of FIELDS and his associates of greater or lesser infamy.

The fact is, that in this matter the instincts of the people are wiser than those of the politicians. There never was a single good reason for making a city election depend on party issues. The mischievous absurdity of such a course has been more strongly demonstrated than ever, now that the people of New-York have had a proof that their only chance of victory against their plunderers is by sinking all such issues. If any party attempts to ride roughshod over an aroused people, they will find themselves wofully defeated. Under the operation of the minority principle, their defeat will be all the more signal, inasmuch as a failure to respect the rights of the minority will only result in giving the minority more representation than their numbers entitle them to. Some wiseacres have found it to be an objection to the charter that its provisions cut both ways, and that a compact minority of thieves can as easily return a representative to the Board of Aldermen as a minority of honest men. Of course they can, and this is only another of the penalties we must pay for having so long allowed the City to be made a first-class nursery-ground for all manner of thieves. We have never heard anybody pretend, however, that the thieves are a majority of the community. What the charter is designed to accomplish is to enable the honest majority to rule, instead of the minority of thieves as heretofore. The professional criminals of any Senate district could hardly find a greater rascal to represent them than WM. M. TWEED. We should imagine that a more foul-mouthed or brazen candidate than TOM FIELDS could not be desired by the worst gang of rowdies that ever infested the City. Were those greatly misunderstood artists—the City pickpockets—to combine for the purpose of having their interests looked after at Police Head-quarters, could they possibly make a more judicious selection than HANK SMITH? Under the new charter, the people have only to do their duty to render such men few and far between, either in legislative or executive positions. Under the old régime they, and such as they, ruled us all, and their yoke was so firmly fixed on our necks that we have not yet succeeded in throwing it entirely off. It is eminently instructive to find newspapers that were foremost in defending the rule of public thieves, growing exceedingly solicitous lest the minority principle should give us one or two Aldermen who ought to be in the Penitentiary.

Locking Doors on Railroads.

The deplorable accident which occurred on the New-Haven Railroad on Tuesday, and of which the daughter of Rev. Dr. ROGERS of this City was the victim, is a sad illustration of the remarks made in these columns on Monday regarding some of the arbitrary and absurd rules of that monopoly. In this instance, a lady steps on board a train before it starts, but on trying to get into a car finds the door locked, and herself standing helpless upon the platform just as the train moves, and exposed to the full force of a furious gale of wind. The result is that she is either jolted or blown off from the car, and almost killed by the fall. Independently of the doubly-sad circumstances of this case, we cannot help denouncing this car-locking imposition of the New-Haven Railroad Company as an outrage which should promptly cease. The rule is simply one of those petty and puerile expedients whereby this Company's managers are continually annoying those who travel upon their road. There is no good reason why the cars should be locked at all, and certainly none for keeping them locked after the trains have started. The morning trains, we are told, are made disagreeable and dangerous by this same door-locking rule, which is enforced under the baseless pretext that hack drivers can only thus be kept out of the cars. The most plausible reason for the rule is that school-boys sometimes avail themselves of the chance to get a free ride of a few blocks through the tunnel. But considering that there are drivers and brakemen on the cars, who might either drive off the boys or collect a fare from them, it seems scarcely necessary to lock in a hundred passengers merely to look out a boy or two. The sad scene of Tuesday was one which should be atoned for by the Company both by reparation in damages, and by reformation in management. Not another key should be allowed in the hands of their brakemen. Now that the Company has been shown what possibilities of danger lie hid in the miserable practice, we trust they are not going to wait to burn up a car-load of captive passengers before coming to their senses upon the subject.

The Wickenburg Massacre.

Capt. R. F. O'BEIRNE, of the Twenty-first United States Infantry, has written a letter from Camp Date Creek, Arizona, to Hon. VINCENT COLYER, which is likely to provoke controversy. It will be remembered that at the Wickenburg massacre, when poor young LORING and others were murdered, as was reported, by the Apaches, there were some survivors, among whom was a Mr. KRUGER. This gentleman managed to save himself and a Miss SHEPHERD, although both were shot, and reached the post commanded by Capt. O'BEIRNE. Mr. KRUGER subsequently wrote a letter, which was published in various papers, charging the Captain with "inhumanity" toward Miss SHEPHERD and himself. Capt. O'BEIRNE, in his letter to Mr. COLYER, denies the charge in very strong terms. He declares that KRUGER is "an inconsiderable liar and slanderer," that he is utterly unable "to conceive what the fellow expected to gain by writing such lies," and that "he is, however, such a disreputable character that he is unworthy of mention." These are very hard words, and perhaps they may be entirely deserved—but Mr. KRUGER is a German gentleman formerly of St. Louis, of scholarly habits and tastes, who has written considerably for the American Press, and, we should say, is quite incapable of the deliberate and malignant lying thus imputed to him.

A cloud still seems to hang over this affair of the Wickenburg massacre, which we should be glad to have cleared up. It has been apparently to the interest of certain persons to have it supposed that the men who attacked the stage-coach, and killed LORING and the rest were not Apaches at all, but Mexicans. When the story first came forward there was no question on the subject, and it was understood that the survivors all agreed in stating that the assailants were Indians. Since then, however, frequent and energetic efforts have been made to impress the public mind that Mexicans and not Indians were the criminals. Gen. DUDLEY, the nearest officer of his rank stationed in the neighborhood of the scene of the tragedy, has written a letter in which occurs the following passage:

"The robbery of the mail stage and the killing of five citizens by an unknown party, near Wickesburg, of course is laid to the Indians. At first even the Prescott papers partially admitted that it was a party of Mexican bandits from Sonora. Indians, when they attack a stage, are not apt to leave the horses, blankets, &c. In this case they did. I do not believe there was an Apache near the scene of the murder. All honest men have the same opinion if they dared to express it."

But Capt. MEINHOLD, who went over the ground directly after the murders, and sent in an official report on the subject, declares that the tracks he followed bore every evidence of being those of Indians; that they diverged, after going some distance from where the stage was attacked, into various tracks, branching in different directions, after the manner of Indians; and other signs were not wanting confirmatory to the practiced eye of the truth of this story. On the other hand, again, Agent TANNER, who lives at a reservation near the scene of the attack, and who also professes to have been over the ground, writes that he does not believe an Indian was engaged in the affair. In this conflict of opinion the testimony of the surviving eye-witnesses ought surely to carry some weight, especially in the absence of any conceivable motive for misrepresentation. We trust more light may be thrown on this business, and that those who can throw it will come forward without delay.

Floods in the Missouri River.

The inhabitants of the towns situated on the banks of the Missouri River are just now in a painful state of excitement, over the prospect of disastrous floods during the Spring. Indeed, in the breaking up of ice in the Platte, they have already had a foretaste of what is coming. A telegram from St. Joseph, Mo., published a few days ago, announced that the river at that point had risen to more than four feet above its greatest height at this season. The result was that bridges were carried away, and a great deal of damage done to property. Serious floods have occurred in the Missouri River at intervals since 1783. In 1785, BECK'S history informs us that the waters rose thirty feet above the ordinary level, and in its flow through the States of Missouri and Illinois, submerged about seven hundred square miles of the best farms in the world. The aggregate loss reached several millions of dollars, and created much suffering. The greater portion of a convent at Kaskaskia was swept away. The waters continued so high that a steam-boat had to be chartered to convey the nuns and their pupils to St. Louis. In 1811 and 1812 there were heavy floods also, although none of them could be compared to that of 1785, from which period there was really no overflow of great magnitude until the month of June, 1844. The fall of snow on the mountains during that year was heavy enough to have produced a great flood of itself; but before the thaw had properly set in, there was a downpour of rain in Kansas and Western Missouri, which continued steadily for thirty days, swelling the river to Amazonian proportions, and carrying death and destruction for hundreds of miles. In 1869 there was another great flood, but it came so soon after a dry season that very little damage was done. This year the snow-fall has been as great, if not greater, than it was in 1844. There is also more ice in the tributary streams, and when the thaw begins in good earnest, there is reason to fear that the flood will be larger, and the destruction more general than at any period since 1785.

Senator Sherman and Copyright.

The copyright controversy has passed into another phase. First we had a bill which, it was claimed, embodied the views of the publishers; then came one from the authors; this was succeeded by a third, which absurdly attempted to reconcile the absolutely irreconcilable ideas of each of these interested parties; and now, Senator SHERMAN steps in with an entirely independent measure, which has at least this advantage over all the others proposed—the certainty of being entirely unsatisfactory to every one concerned.

This bill provides that any book, map, chart, dramatic work, or musical composition that may first be published in any foreign country, may be copyrighted in the United States by the author, within twelve months after its first appearance, on the same terms as if he were a citizen of the United States, and that any one may publish it in this country, but that such publisher shall pay the author, for a term of ten years, five per cent. upon "the gross cost of publication." In the absence of any contract, it is provided that the author of any work thus reprinted may recover from the publisher this five per cent. by a suit in law or equity. The importation of the work is to be left without restriction.

The very wording of this measure not only shows that Senator SHERMAN has prepared the bill in entire ignorance of the principles upon which the business of publishing is conducted, but that he has done so without the slightest consultation with any one of the numerous publishers or authors who have visited Washington during the last few weeks, and any one of whom could have told him that whatever percentage is paid to an author is based either on the wholesale or, far more generally, on the retail price of the book. Such a term as the "gross cost of publication" is, we are told, unknown to the trade, and precisely what it means, therefore, it is impossible to determine. Those qualified to judge, however, assure us that an author might, under such a law, realize five or six cents per copy on a book which would retail at five dollars.

If this payment of copyright to foreign authors is simply a matter of conscience money, therefore, the publishers of the United States might well accept this legal condonation of the matter; but with all their virtuous pretense of wanting to give authors their dues, it is as well that the public should understand that all this bubbub over copyright, so far as many of the publishers are concerned, has an altogether different origin from that involved in any such merely sentimental considerations. The publishers do not so much desire to protect foreign authors as they do to be protected against each other. As matters now stand it is very frequently only the fear of incurring the hostility of some house stronger than his own, which prevents one publisher from reprinting upon arrival any popular foreign work which may be issued. Since Mr. SHERMAN'S bill does not make it possible for the foreign author to confer exclusive privileges upon any publisher, this state of affairs would not be mended in the least. The publishers, therefore, are sure to oppose Mr. SHERMAN'S bill, if they think it worth while to give it any attention whatever, and foreign authors, who are already receiving from this country copyrights tenfold as large as Mr. SHERMAN proposes, as well as American authors who may be looking forward to an international copyright law to secure them large returns for the sale of their works in England, will not be at all grateful to the Senator for placing so low a valuation upon their labors.

Then, too, what clause in the Constitution confers upon Congress the right to interfere in this extraordinary manner between private parties, and to fix the price which an author shall pay the publisher for his labor? Indeed, Senator SHERMAN seems to have framed his bill without having read the only clause in the Constitution bearing upon this question, and which says that Congress shall have the power "To promote the progress of science and useful arts by securing for limited times to authors and inventors the exclusive right to their respective writings and discoveries." It would be interesting to know how Senator SHERMAN construes this clause so as to make it the basis for such extraordinary legislation as that which he proposes.

FREDERICK the Great once called a General to account for having lost a battle, and asked him to explain the cause of his defeat. "May it please your Majesty," replied the officer, "I have seventeen reasons. First, my ammunition gave out; second"—"Stop there," interrupted FREDERICK; "your first excuse is sufficient." It is to be hoped that Senator SHERMAN will find this last objection to his proposed bill—its unconstitutionality—a sufficient reason for not asking its further consideration.

The Yellowstone Park Bill.

It is a satisfaction to know that the Yellowstone Park bill has passed the House. Our readers have been made well acquainted with the beautiful and astonishing features of a region unlike any other in the world; and will approve the policy by which, while the title is still vested in the United States, provision has been made to retain it perpetually for the nation. The Yosemite Valley was similarly appropriated to public use some years back, and that magnificent spot was thus saved from possible defacement or other unseemly treatment that might have attended its remaining in private hands. One consideration wanting in the latter case recommends the Yellowstone bill, which is that by reason of the great altitude of the country—seven thousand feet above the sea—it must always be unavailable for agriculture. There is frost in the Yellowstone Valley every month in the year, and the mineral character of much of the soil likewise forbids tillage. The new National Park lies in two Territories, Montana and Wyoming, but the jurisdiction of the soil, by the passage of the bill, remains forever with the Federal Government. In this respect the position of the Yellowstone Park differs from that of the Yosemite; since the latter was granted by Government to the State of California on certain conditions, one of which excludes the local control of the United States; while the former will always be within that control.

Perhaps, no scenery in the world surpasses for sublimity that of the Yellowstone Valley; and certainly no region anywhere is so rich, in the same space, in wonderful natural curiosities. In addition to this, from the height of the land, and the salubrity of the atmosphere, physicians are of opinion that the Yellowstone Park will become a valuable resort for certain classes of invalids; and in all probability it will soon appear that the mineral springs, with which the place abounds, possess various curative powers. It is far from unlikely that the park may become in a few years the Baden or Homburg of America, and that strangers may flock thither from all parts of the world to drink the waters, and gaze on picturesque splendors only to be seen in the heart of the American Continent.

A Modern Vehm-Gericht.

One of the chief incidents of Mr. WILKIE COLLINS' well-known novel, The Woman in White, is the assassination in London of an Italian refugee, Count Fosco, by order of a secret society of which he was a member. To most readers, the episode must have seemed improbable, if not absolutely incredible. Yet, within a few weeks, if we are to accept with unquestioning faith a queer story published in the London papers, Mr. COLLINS' bold invention has been literally realized. A man well known in commercial circles has suddenly disappeared, leaving behind him a letter purporting to have been written on the eve of his execution by a secret society to which he had belonged, and whose orders he had in some way disobeyed. Accompanying this was a missive supposed to come from his judges, announcing the fulfillment of the sentence. Certainly there is here a most promising sensation, and one that ought to stir in the average British public, already profoundly agitated by Alabama claims and rumors of Fenian uprising, a very lively emotion.

More in detail, the circumstances of this curious story are these: Messrs. W. BLEWS & SON, manufacturers of gas chandeliers at London and Birmingham, state that on the 18th of January last they received a letter dated the 12th, from their agent at Moscow, Mr. L. R. BAUER, announcing his immediate departure for England to consult his employers on business. He wrote again from Riga on the 14th of the same month, from Berlin twice on the 20th, and from Hamburg on the 22d. On the 25th he reached London, and telegraphed to the Messrs. BLEWS that he would leave for Birmingham on the 10:30 train. Subsequently they received a telegram stating that Mr. BAUER had missed this train, but would leave at 3 in the afternoon. This is the last that has been seen or heard of him, except the letter mentioned above, which is dated Jan. 27, and announces his impending death. It is addressed to his employers, and is permitted to be written, it says, "by special grace." It hints darkly at some criminal act which the writer was bound to perform by his obligations to the secret order which he had joined "in a sad error" of youth and inexperience. Disobedience subjected him to death, and this bitter alternative he had chosen rather than "do things against which his whole soul revolted." His luggage, he had added, had been destroyed, and the inclosure referred to from his executioners, stated that for their own safety certain papers of the firm in BAUER'S keeping had been also burnt. This awe-inspiring document was signed "A Sufficient Number."

Accepting implicitly what is here related for fact, we have certainly all that the most ardent lover of mystery could desire. This brief correspondence contains all the elements of a first-class sensation, out of which a brisk imagination may weave a most thrilling and complicated romance, bristling with daggers and evil-minded masks, with secret midnight tribunals, with shadowy conspirators and delightfully unintelligible warnings, with love, and revolution, and murder in their most attractive phases. Unhappily, however, there is one weak point in the plot, which, for the sake of our romantic readers, we almost hesitate to divulge. Mr. BAUER'S mental poise has never been of the soundest. He had been once completely deranged, and it is quite as likely that this extraordinary correspondence is the result of a second aberration, as that the rule of the Carbonari flourishes in England. Again, there may have been a method in Mr. BAUER'S madness, which made a sudden disappearance expedient. Yet, underneath all its apparent wildness and extravagance, there still remains in the story a grain, a mustard seed call it, of possibility, and we hope to see it receive the thorough investigation for which a portion of the London Press imperatively calls.

The Late Father of the Baltimore Bar.

Mr. JONATHAN MEREDITH, whose death last Sunday we have already briefly noticed, was, in a remarkable degree, a link between the past and our present national history. Mr. MEREDITH had only a month ago delivered in the Peabody Institute at Baltimore two most instructive and interesting lectures, in tones distinctly audible to the furthest end of the vast apartment in which he spoke. In the course of one of these addresses, he spoke of his acquaintance as a lad of fourteen with WASHINGTON, and recalled with pride the great General's having laid his hand upon his head and blessed him.

Many other memories, also, of the highest interest the venerable lecturer referred to, and it was clear to those who heard him, as to those who enjoyed his private acquaintance, that his was a mind which utterly refused to accord with the body containing it, as regards the feebleness incidental to age. His manner had the exquisite courtesy of the old school of highbred American gentlemen. For many years past his time had been almost entirely spent in his library, and he might truly have sung with SOUTHEY:

"My days among the dead are passed,
Around me I behold,
Where'er these wandering eyes are cast,
The mighty minds of old;
My never-failing friends are they,
With whom I converse day by day."

There is good reason to hope that some fruits of these later labors, of an active and interesting career, will, sooner or later, be given to the public. The most melancholy reflection attending the departure of men like this is—have they many successors among us? We have a few students, who shut themselves up with their great accumulation of books, and enjoy a mysterious reputation for vast acquirement. But where are those who, like Mr. MEREDITH, and many others of the Bar of old, are at once men of learning, lovers of the belles-lettres, and, in the best sense, men of the world, too; delighting in talent, delighting in easy hospitality, social intercourse, and casting a charm around every company they frequent? Within ten days Baltimore has lost two such men in Mr. MEREDITH and Mr. T. H. MORRIS.

MINOR TOPICS.

A saving of five millions of dollars on account of the payment of another eighty-two millions of the war indemnity a year before it is due, may be sufficient to warrant the extraordinary energy lately exhibited by France in raising the sum required. The prospect of hastening the removal of German troops from French soil has probably been a still more potent incentive to the offer which Germany has accepted. Were France as capable of the self-denying effort of reducing her army, there would be a better prospect for her regeneration than at present appears. In this direction she could easily save fifty millions a year, and gain a reputation for being in the van of European progress besides.

Is it not about time that the systematic bullying of Controller GREEN by men from the Department of Public Works was put a stop to? The Controller was put where he is to protect the public against official plunderers, great and small. In addition to the general laws under which he administers his office, the Legislature has lately created a special law which makes the performance of the ordinary business of the Department of Finance more cumbrous and tedious than it otherwise would be. The Controller applied promptly on the opening of the session of the Legislature for power to pay the lamp and gas men, who yesterday threatened him with personal violence, as well as all other men having just and urgent claims against the City. It took the Legislature seven weeks to give him this power, and even then it was hampered by certain restrictions that render the disposal of claims necessarily slow work. If the lamp and gas men have been kept too long waiting, they have the Legislature chiefly to thank, and possibly also the numerous sinecures which figure on their pay-rolls. In any case, these exhibitions of mob law in the Controller's office must be stopped.

The method of "quotation" adopted by the Tribune, of this City, is thus pleasantly alluded to by Col. FORNEY:

"Our good friend o the New-York Tribune, in calling attention to what purports to be an extract from the last number of our Anecdotes of Public Men, takes the ground that we tried to show that somebody promised that GRANT should be re-elected in 1872 if he should consent to be elected by the Republicans in 1868. As the extract from the Anecdote is printed in the Tribune, this inference is perfectly fair; but unfortunately we are made to use the following language, which does not appear in the Anecdote itself: 'Thus it will be seen that Gen. GRANT not only desired to remain President for two terms, but that it was only on the assurance of his friends that he should be re-elected that he accepted the office at all.' These are given as our words, when they are simply the opinion of the correspondent of the Tribune. That Mr. GREELEY, reading this statement as our own, should have made the comment to which we refer is perfectly natural. There was not only no understanding that Gen. GRANT was to be re-elected, but there could be no such understanding, simply because nobody had any right to make a covenant of the kind."

Vesuvius is beginning to get lively again. After one of its long periods of inaction, or rather of unseen preparation, it begins to show signs of mischief. A month ago the smoke was very delicate and transparent, but it soon after began to get denser, and to be laden at times with puffs of ashes. These, more recently, have been followed by other projectiles, and the Naples Pungolo of Feb. 3, says fire could then be seen from Naples, vomiting from the crater every night. The eruptive movement appears at three distinct points, and fears are entertained of a serious outbreak. They are playing a much-abused version of the "Last Days of Pompeii" just now in London, and perhaps the volcano feels impelled to protest against it.

Admirers of the old wooden line-of-battle ship, with its hearts of oak, and the thousand memories that song and romance have helped to endear, will pluck up spirit again from a rather provoking accident that has happened to one of the best of the British iron-clads. The Hotspur, commanded by Lord JOHN HAY, was run into by what the Army and Navy Gazette describes as an "old Dublin pig-boat," and besides having her ports and boats carried away "was mauled so severely" as to be obliged to put into harbor for repairs. The old pig-boat, on the other hand, appears to have sustained no injury at all, and went on her way without any difficulty. It will be remembered that at the battle of Lissa the most formidable iron-clad in the Italian Navy was run down and sunk by Admiral TEGETHOFF in a wooden vessel. The same thing, if we mistake not, occurred in our own war. It would seem, therefore, that iron-clads are not yet invincible even to unarmored antagonists.

The editor of the Halifax Chronicle, from a long and careful study of a Treaty of Separation found in Lord BURY'S Exodus of the Western Nations, has been convinced that a treaty "agreeing substantially" with that document, is at present actually in existence between Canada and England. In this treaty it is made lawful for the Sovereign of Great Britain and Ireland to give twelve months' notice of his intention to withdraw from the exercise of all rights over his subjects of "The New Nation," provided they have first intimated a desire that he shall do so. But without such an intimation, he shall not be able to cast them adrift. It is further stipulated that the fortifications shall be delivered over to the constituted authorities of the "New Nation," to be maintained under their exclusive control. The Chronicle argues that "The New Nation" is in reality "The New Dominion," and points to the fact that nearly all the English soldiers have been recalled, as conclusive evidence of the truth of its statement. Then again, in order to dispel every doubt, we are reminded that Sir JOHN A. MACDONALD earned his spurs in negotiating the treaty, and that Lord BURY was high in the confidence of the Home Government, for the reason that he had held the office of Civil Secretary under two successive Governors-General. But in spite of all this testimony, the other Dominion journals decline to be convinced.

Death of a New-York Passenger on the Blockaded Central Pacific Trains.

From the San Francisco Bulletin, Feb. 21.

In Monday's Bulletin we alluded to sickness among the blockaded passengers, and mentioned the case of a gentleman who arrived at the Lick House in an emaciated condition. Investigation shows that this case, one of the most remarkable on record, has been attended with fatal results. Mr. BROWERS, the gentleman in question, was attacked by erysipelas some ten days ago, and, owing to the privations and exposure of the snow-drifts, suffered terrible anguish, and, though a large and powerful man when in good health, was reduced by disease to a mere skeleton. He intended to visit the Sandwich Islands, where his daughter, Mrs. SIMMONS, was residing, and, desiring to give her a pleasant surprise, he sent no notification of his projected visit. In the mean time the daughter left the Islands, arrived at San Francisco en route for the East, and here awaited the raising of the snow blockade. While reading the evening paper, the name of a sick gentleman caught her eye. She hastened to the hotel—to the bedside of her father—and remained there until his death, at 10 o'clock yesterday morning. Mr. BROWERS was a New-York merchant, though what special business he was engaged in we have not been able to ascertain. He was universally respected by the passengers, who knew him only as a companion on the journey.

Queer Mistakes Through Close Resemblances.

A brief letter from Dorchester, Mass., to the Boston Advertiser, tells the following:

"There are in this town two twin brothers, whose resemblance to each other is so strong that strangers can hardly tell them apart. They keep a grocery and provision 'store,' and were one day bringing in bags of meal from a wagon, which was out of sight from inside the store. NATHAN had his coat on, but ELI was in his shirt-sleeves. A stranger in the shop watched them coming in and going out one after the other, but only one was visible at a time, and at last he exclaimed to ELI, 'Well, you're the smartest man I ever saw; but why do you keep putting on and taking off your coat.' These brothers and several other men were in the habit of getting up very early and going to swim in the 'Reservoir Pond,' and once ELI going, as was his wont, to NATHAN'S house, to call him, by tapping on the pane, saw his own face reflected from the glass: and taking it for his brother, called out, 'Come on; they're all waiting for you.'"

How the Jurors are Guarded in Iowa—An Omaha Story.

From the Omaha (Nebraska) Tribune, Feb. 26.

Sheriff GREBE was over in Glenwood, Iowa, a day or two ago, where he attended a murder trial, wherein a man named BRIGGS, who was arrested near Schuyler, in this State, was on trial for killing two men, named KING and PALMER, three years ago. In this State the jury are kept in strict privacy, but in Glenwood he found a number of the jurors boarding at the same hotel and eating at the same table with the defendant in the trial, and all publicly discussing the testimony and the merits of the case. One hundred witnesses were summoned for the defense.

NOTES OF TRAVEL.

SAN FRANCISCO, Thursday, Feb. 1, 1872.

Riding a two-horse act I find an exceedingly difficult performance; indeed, I am inclined to think it for a woman of my "heft" an impossible feat. Lecturing and letter-writing are incompatible. Only a Train or a Taylor can reconcile them and blend them in beautiful harmony. Face-to-face relations with the public are demoralizing. If for the six weeks past I have done what I ought to have done, I have left undone much that I ought to have done and there is no work in me!

During the dismal deluge which came upon us in the holidays I could not write, of course. I fled to Belmont, to the society of the beautiful and beloved Portia, who there presides—to whom the wise men of the East and the Princes of Cathay and Cipango pay homage. In those wide, hospitable halls I found gaiety unclouded and bloom undrenched—a clime and a climate of their own. There it was out of the question for me to shut myself up and work. I would be idle if I died for it. Besides, it was no discouraging to hear of railroads and bridges washed away in every direction, and mail-bags afloat. I half believed that should I write a letter for the TIMES I would have to bottle it up and let it drift. Then came the snow-blockades, and the prospect of all mail-matter en route being frozen up, not to be thawed out before Spring.

Since the storm, life in California has worn a particularly festive aspect. The hills have put on new coats of loveliest, liveliest green. In the gardens, the lilies and geraniums have taken heart of grace, red and white roses have flung out fresh banners of bloom, as though ready to resume the old York and Lancaster strife. The beauty of these Winter days—"falsely so called"—is indescribable. It is now "from morn to dewy eve," one steady tempest of sunshine, as a little while ago it was one steady storm of rain. Doubtless we shall have plenty of dark and rainy days yet this season, but the wettest of the wet must be past. I had before heard of "sheets of rain," but here it came down in blankets—coverlets. There was not, it proved, a perfectly water-proof house in the city. You know all the Pacific Coast Christians had been petitioning and sacrificing for rain for some two years, so that there were long arrearages of prayers to be answered, and it descended till every reasonable claim on the bounty of Providence was liquidated. After the storm came the Japanese Embassy, dropping down on "Frisco" as though out of another planet. They have all been very thoroughly lionized. The Prime Minister, Prince IWAKURA, is much commended for his "wise saws" and Oriental courtesy, and the Princesses brought over for their education are admired as remarkably modest and well-behaved young ladies. They are said to be impatient to don the American dress, which they admire, "all but the hump on the back."

Prince IWAKURA gives it out as his opinion—and his "language is plain"—that women should be educated equally with men. These heathens are getting on quite too fast. Let the American Board of Commissioners for Foreign Missions look to it, and send a fresh squad of missionaries to Japan. And let care be taken to select pious young men from Yale and Andover—not from the women-invaded universities of Michigan and California. They may be martyred, these apostles of godly conservatism; but they will die in a good cause. This pestilent woman question is traveling round the world in advance of the telegraph. I have a poetic friend in this city who is about to flee to a lonely island in the South Seas to get away from it. I tell him he flees in vain. The Robinson Crusoe of today finds on the rocks of his Juan Fernandez notices of Women's Rights Conventions pleasantly intermingled with advertisements of patent-right medicines.

I have lately paid a visit a Sacramento, and seen the State Solons in council assembled—a fine, live-looking set of men. The new Capitol is a noble building, bearing a striking resemblance to the dear old Capitol, we fondly remember, as more symmetrical, if less magnificent, than the sacred conglomerate edifice we all at Washington turn our faces toward, at morning and evening devotions.

I noticed with pleasure that the rotunda, corridors and halls of this California Capitol were exceptionally clean for such precincts, showing that the honorable Legislators were not disposed to abuse their expectorating privileges.

I was charmingly entertained at the beautiful residence of Ex-Gov. STANFORD—gracious King Leland—monarch of all the railroads he surveys, a man not only with a masterly brain for affairs, for the management of gigantic enterprises, for knowledge of men and means, but with a fair, liberal mind, and a kindly heart, a true representative man for a grand State like California—almost an Empire.

The site of Sacramento is low and flat, and in some of the lower grade unpaved streets, there were depths of mud apparently unfathomable, but still we drove much about town, and a mile or two into the country, our driver continually picking the way. There are in Sacramento many private residences, and it abounds and super-abounds in shrubberies and flowers.

With my ruling passion, strong even in California, I was not long in making affectionate inquiries of Gov. STANFORD in regard to his famous trotting horse Charley, or "Wonder," as he had been popularly christened. In reply, my host offered to drive me out to the race-course, where the animal is kept, that I might see for myself; and the next morning I had the honor of a presentation to the most princely piece of horse-flesh I have seen for many a long day. Though not showy, and not, at present, carefully kept up, he is really a grand creature—beautiful almost equally in action and repose, intelligent, gentle, tractable, yet full of joyous fire. I did not see him in harness, as the ground was too heavy to allow of his being put to his speed, but a little son of the trainer mounted him bare-back, and let me see a little of his action. The morning was beautiful, and he seemed to revel in the sunshine and fresh air, and to thrill with a fine ecstasy of life. The trainer of this Occidental treasure trove is a Yankee of the Yanks, who devotes himself to his charge with the utmost enthusiasm, and brings up his children in the same fealty. Every night he or one of his boys sleeps beside Royal Charlie, ready to wake at his lightest whinny. In truth, the horse is far less an object of pride and solicitude to his owner than to his trainer. No railroads come in to rival, no steam-boats to run him down, in the loyal affections of "Yank SMITH." He is jealous of his record to the fourth part of a second.

This noble horse is scarcely yet a public personage, but perhaps a few personalities will be pardoned, and as I have the data from the best authority, be of interest to horse lovers.

Charley's pedigree has not been fully and accurately made out. He is supposed to be of Morgan stock, and was raised in the country, near Sacramento. He passed into the possession of a man who worked him in drawing sand, for the railroad, with a much larger horse, who was slow and did not do his share of the work, so finally his owner sold him to a butcher for $75, saying that he could get a horse for $60 that would answer his purpose as well. The butcher sold him to a ranchman, who drove him in a market-wagon. A neighbor, a little wiser in horse matters, bought him cheaply enough, gave him a little training, and sold him to Gov. STANFORD for $250, and a valuable horse named Grant. Since his wonderful speed has been ascertained, Gov. STANFORD has received immense offers for him. One demented admirer offered a ranch and seventy-five horses of good blood, for all of which possessions he would not take, he said, $75,000. In refusing this handsome offer, the Governor said he was reminded of a story he read in his boyhood, of an English highwayman, (perhaps Dick Turpin,) who once, when fleeing from the Sheriff, and hard pressed, caused his horse, (perhaps Black Bess,) to take an astonishing leap over a chasm or stream, which feat a wonder-struck farmer beholding, cried out: "I would give fifty bullocks for that horse." But the flying rider shouted back: "Fifty bullocks couldn't take that leap."

Charley is now eight years old. He is fifteen and one-half hands high, and, when in good condition for speed, weighs 800 pounds. He is in color a rich bay, which becomes a dark brown in Winter.

The track of the Sacramento Trotting Park, though the best in the State, is not in a condition to make a perfect test of the speed of this remarkable horse. It is too flat and sharp at the turns. The Governor is having these defects remedied, so in a few months we may hear great things of this wonder of the West, and Dexter and Goldsmith Maid may have to look to their laurels. The tests of speed thus far (though SMITH declares that the horse has never yet put forth his best energies) have given this result. Esto! Best mile, 2:18½; best half mile, 1:05; best quarter 31½ seconds. SMITH evidently believes his pet to be the fastest horse in the world, "when his work is fairly cut out afore him," and perhaps he is, as California is undoubtedly the fastest country in the world.

I made the journey down to San Francisco on a glorious afternoon. The country, such of it as was out of water, looked green with promise, where the wild turf stretched away in mighty, magnificent undulations—and, in the plowed lands, awaiting the planter and the sower. Ah, "there's richness!"

We have lately had an Artists' Reception—a very gay and charming affair. All the beauty and fashion and celebrity of San Francisco were there, with several distinguished and many undistinguished strangers—and, of course, all the editors, and reporters and Bohemians. BIERSTADT was there with his lovely wife. They have come here to Winter, to be ready for another triumphant art-campaign in the Spring. STODDARD, the poet, (he of the Pacific Coast and strain,) was there with his kindly, languid smile—a young man whom everybody likes and calls "CHARLEY"—and JOAQUIN MILLER, rough of dress, but mild of address, pale and pensive and peculiar, trying his best to look unconscious of the wistful gaze of hundreds of bright eyes. Quite the opposite of this pale, wild Swinburne of the Sierras, was the genial and fresh-hearted English gentleman, and fine actor, HENRY EDWARDS, with his wonderful atmosphere of joyous vitality, naturalness and manliness. Everybody likes him too, and calls him "Harry"—but no man has more the respect of the community. The stage if it does not meet all his aspirations, has not destroyed them—if it does not satisfy, it has not spoiled him. He devotes himself with singular enthusiasm to natural science, and has one of the very finest private collections of butterflies and beetles in the world. A finished and conscientious artist, he yet makes his art almost secondary to science. His theatrical tours are butterfly chases as well. There were some fine pictures exhibited, on that evening, mostly by young artists. I shall not attempt anything like an art criticism. I only intend to speak of the pictures of such artists as I happen to know, and know as good fellows. The group of paintings by the young German, TOBY ROSENTHAL, was constantly surrounded by an admiring crowd. This artist, who has already an enviable reputation in Germany—to which he is about to return—paints with a great feeling for, and fidelity to nature. Mr. TRACY, a young American, with some European study, exhibited several admirable mountain views. He is particularly at home in the Yosemite. Mr. LEMON, an English sculptor and painter, exhibited some cattle pieces, which struck me as full of force and spirit. This young man has a career before him, or I am no prophetess.

We have had a little theatrical sensation here—the appearance, for the first time in English, of Mme. VENETA, a favorite German actress. I have seen her as Lady Macbeth, and that heart-rending Deborah. She is a woman of undeniable genius, somewhat unequal in her acting, but, for the most part, playing with singular intensity and absorption. She played poor, fiery, forsaken Deborah with truth and tenderness, with superb scorn and magnificent abandon. She is not very young; she could hardly have united such concentration of passion and such self-mastery if she were. She is not decidedly beautiful, but her face has immense power of expression. She speaks English remarkably well, with but a slight accent, and in a voice singularly like that of CHARLOTTE CUSHMAN—whose superbly passionate acting she frequently reminds me of. As Lady Macbeth, she was well supported, Mr. MCCULLOUGH was, of course, the Macbeth, and Mr. EDWARDS made the very best Macduff I have ever seen. In Deborah, she was all in all—rowing against a heavy sea of indifference, or stupidity on the stage, but carrying the entire audience with her. I hope you will see this admirable actress and brave woman on the English stage in New-York. Allowed only two or three nights between two seasons, she has not had half a chance here.

FEB. 7.—This is the last day of the Chinese old year. At midnight will commence the noisy rejoicings for the new year. This merry-making and feasting will continue in full blast for three days at least. I know not when this letter will reach New-York. It is hardly worth while to post anything. The mails will not go through before the Japanese. They are blockaded at Salt Lake City, whose resources of instruction and amusement they will perhaps have ample time to test. By the way, in one of my letters to the TIMES from Utah I spoke of W. S. GODBE, the leader of the Mormon reform movement, with some disrespect, as only rebelling against BRIGHAM YOUNG's tithing ordinances, and as still adhering to the monstrous system of polygamy. I wrote as I was informed—or, as it seems, misinformed. I have met in this city a clergyman who knows Mr. GODBE well, and thoroughly understands his movement and his motives, and by him, and through reading some of Mr. GODBE's own earnest and able writings, I have been set right. He goes against the entire theocracy—against the rule of BRIGHAM YOUNG—and against polygamy, "as clearly at variance with the principle of woman's equality with man, and therefore inimical to her elevation and fatal to her happiness." He does not, however, believe that Mormonism can be overthrown by religious persecution or legal enactments. He thinks that moral and social elements are constantly at work sapping and mining its very foundations; that intolerance and harsh treatment will only give it a sort of galvanic semblance of a new life, which, in a last fierce struggle with the overpowering spirit of the age, will work mischief and cause needless suffering.

I am convinced that Mr. GODBE is in his spirit a true reformer; that he has sacrificed, braved and endured much for what he believes to be truth and justice, and I hope that great good will come out of his movement for such men and women as, like him, once accepted Mormonism in good faith and with devout interest.

GRACE GREENWOOD.

What Shall be Done with Such Boys as These?

The Boston Journal says that the following case of cruelty by two boys in Chelsea, Mass., has come to light, and for absolute fiendishness is rarely equaled:

"Last Tuesday a small boy seven years old, named TRACY B. HAYDEN, son of Mr. WILLIAM HAYDEN, musician, No. 107 Walnut-street, went out with the son of one of his neighbors (Mr. FLOOD) to play. They were accosted by two other and larger boys at the Eastern Depot, who told them there was a parade of soldiers back of Powderhorn which they were going to see, and induced them to go also. On the way up they told the Flood boy they did not want his company and ordered him home. He complied, and young HAYDEN kept on with the strangers. When they arrived back of the hill there was no parade to be seen; but they stripped all the clothes off the poor young lad, tied him up under his arms to a tree, his feet being on the ground, unmercifully beat him with a piece of board until his flesh all over his body was black and blue, leaving the marks of the board on the flesh. Two of his teeth were knocked out and his face otherwise disfigured. One of the boys held an open jack-knife in his hand, threatening that if he did not stop calling for help he would mutilate him, and apparently made the attempt. They afterward took him to a pool of water and washed him. He returned home in the evening in a frightful condition, say his parents, and could give no lucid account of what had occurred, save as the marks on his body testified that he had been horribly abused.

Arrival of the Inman Steam-ship City of Brooklyn.

The Inman steam-ship City of Brooklyn, from Liverpool on Feb. 15 and Queenstown on Feb. 16, reached this port last night. Her advices are later by one day than those already at hand.

MR. WILSON ON PUBLIC AFFAIRS.

Interesting Address to Working Men—Are They Worse off Now Than Formerly?—What the Republican Party Has Done—The President and His Traducers—A Speech for All Thoughtful Men to Read.

We have already given a brief report by telegraph of the speech delivered by Senator WILSON at Great Falls, N. H., on the 24th inst. We now present some interesting extracts from a fuller report:

WHAT THE REPUBLICAN PARTY HAS DONE FOR LABORING MEN.

Let us see what the Republican Party has done for the laboring men of this country during the last twelve years. It struck the fetters from four and a half millions of laboring men and women, converted them from things into men and women, in making them free; it struck down that proud, haughty and domineering aristocracy of the South that held the doctrine—and proclaimed it, too—that "capital should own labor;" that the men who toiled for wages were "the mud-sills of society;" that the slavery of working men produced "a class of gentlemen, who were the substitutes for an order of nobility." Those were the doctrines proclaimed in our ears for forty years by the Calhouns, the McDuffies, the Hammonds, the Rhetts, the Ruffins, the Fitzhughs, the Herschell V. Johnsons and men of that class, who laid down the doctrine boldly everywhere that "slavery was the normal condition of laboring men, black and white." In emancipating these four and a half millions of black men and women, we struck down the power of that class of men in this country forever. They made labor dishonorable in 800,000 square miles of the United States, in the sunny South, as they were wont to call it. Laboring men from abroad would not go there to toil; Northern laboring men would not go there to hire; they would not stand by the side of the fettered bondman, where labor was dishonored. But, by the steady, persistent adherence to principle of the men trained in the faith of opposition to slavery, who now stand in the ranks of the Republican Party, all this has been changed, so that to-day the laboring men of New-England can stand up in the Carolinas, by the graves of CALHOUN, of MCDUFFIE, of PICKENS, of the leaders of the slave-power, who proclaimed free society a failure—that free men and women were classed in four subdivisions, "the hireling, the beggar, the thief and the prostitute,"—and look up and behold proud, free, educated "soil toil." We have made labor honorable, even in the rice swamps of the Carolinas and Georgia. We have taken the brand of dishonor from the brow of labor throughout the country; and in doing that we have done more for labor, for the honor and dignity of laboring men than was ever achieved by all the parties that governed this country from the time the pilgrims put their feet upon Plymouth Rock up to the year 1860. [Applause.] And that is not all. We have opened that eight hundred thousand square miles to free laboring men; they can go there now, they are going there now. The German, the Englishman, the Irishman, the New-England Yankee, the men of the Middle States and of the North-western go there now and engage in the mechanic arts, in cultivating the soil, and in all the pursuits of life, and no longer feel the degradation that rested upon working men when labor was extorted from men by the lash. Let the man who toils for wages, whether in the mill, on the farm, or in the mechanic shop, realize what has been done these last dozen years to lift from toil the badge of dishonor, and to open the great South to the free laboring men of the world.

SMALL FARMS VERSUS GREAT PLANTATIONS.

The Republican Party maintains the policy of the small farms against the great plantations. The Democratic Party joined with the South on that issue, as it did in everything, and on every issue. We passed the homestead bill, and JAMES BUCHANAN vetoed it, and the Democratic Party supported him in that veto. The object of that bill was to save the vast public domain to landless men, that they might have small farms, rather than that a few men might have great plantations. We were defeated; but the first year the Republican Party came into power in the midst of the struggle for national existence, we passed the homestead bill, and saved the public lands to the free laboring men of this country forever and forever.

CONDITION OF THE LABORING MEN.

In 1832, in the great debate in the Senate on the tariff, it was said by those who advocated protective duties, that they had raised the price of labor in the United States so that it averaged fifty cents a day. How is it now? This Winter is the most prosperous Winter the United States has seen in its history. Everybody is at work. There is very little suffering anywhere. Why this change? Why this improvement? It is because we have smitten down the slave system, broken down the slave power, lifted up and dignified and honored labor, and developed and diversify our own industries! Today the laboring men and women of our country are earning from three to four times as much in a day as they could earn forty years ago, and a day's work is shorter now than it was then. After I had learned a trade in the place where I live I worked fourteen and fifteen hours a day, month after month, for about forty dollars a month. There are hundreds of men there now who in ten hours can earn a hundred dollars more easily than I could earn forty in fifteen hours. I am grateful to God that this is so. I do not care anything about a few men or corporations piling up a great amount of money. I believe God meant the world to grow good men and women, and not to pile up money. That is my belief, and I want to see the men and women who bear the burdens and do the work have a full share of all they earn, and that an honest day's work shall always have a fair day's pay. [Loud applause.]

WHY THE ADMINISTRATION IS ATTACKED.

Appeals are made specially to laboring men that we have a very corrupt Administration at Washington. One would suppose, to hear our Democratic friends talk, that we never had any corruption before; that they had always been pure, because they never punish a thief. [Applause and laughter.] I propose right here to lay down this proposition: That the reason why this Administration is so assailed is not that it has been more corrupt or as corrupt as its predecessors, but that it is doing much to expose thieving and to punish men who steal. The Democratic Party—I mean, the modern Democratic Party—came into power in 1829, under Gen. JACKSON. One man, SAMUEL SWARTWOUT, in Gen. JACKSON's day, when the Government raised only a few millions of dollars a year, stole $1,000,000 in the New-York Custom-house—nearly as much money as has been stolen under this Administration in three years, in collecting and using one hundred times the amount. The percentage of loss under the Administration has been less than under any Administration since Gen. JACKSON was inaugurated President of the United States. There is not a shadow of doubt of it. I assert here and now that there has been a less percentage of loss under Gen. GRANT's Administration than any other Administration since the days of JOHN QUINCY ADAMS. JOHN TYLER, a son of President TYLER, in a letter recently published, states that there were 1,800 of JACKSON's Administration ninety-eight receivers of the public money, ninety-six of whom were defaulters. Ninety-six out of ninety-eight! [Laughter.] Is there any man here to-night who knows that any one of these men was ever sent to the penitentiary? I believe a Republican thief is a worse man than a Democratic thief. [Laughter.] He has not had so many bad examples. [Laughter and applause.] A Republican thief is the wickedest and meanest thief in all the land. He joins a great party that was brought into being to give freedom to the slave, maintain the unity of the country and preserve the life of the nation. In the ranks of that party is a large mass of the intelligence of the country, of the praying men and women of the country. A man who joins that political organization, betrays his trust, and steals the money of the Government, is a base creature, and the penitentiary is the only place where he should go.

THE DIFFERENCE BETWEEN REPUBLICAN AND DEMOCRATIC THIEVES.

The difference between Republicans and Democrats on this question is this: the Republicans try to discover and punish their thieves; the Democrats never punish theirs. You cannot tell me to-night of a man who stole from the National Government under a Democratic Administration who was sent to the penitentiary. Under this Administration several thieves have been sent there. Most of their stealing was under the late Administration, for there has been little stealing under this. Under ANDREW JOHNSON's Administration mean men got office. He went back on his party, on his record, and upright Democrats paid little attention to him, honest Republicans kept away from the White House, and mean men of both parties sought the benefit of his patronage. * * Since Gen. SPINNER entered upon his office as Treasurer of the United States, fifty-five thousand millions of dollars have passed through his office, counted by from three to four hundred men and women. We have lost between fifty and sixty thousand dollars in these eleven years, while fifty-five thousand millions have gone through the office. We punished one man, fined him, and he is now trying to get back five thousand dollars, for he says we made him pay five thousand dollars more than he stole. [Laughter.] We have sent to prison three trusted clerks, men of capacity and ability; everybody trusted and respected them. That is the way we have served our thieves.

THE "BOSS THIEF" OF THE WORLD.

About the same time the discovery was made of the boldest and most gigantic robbery of the people ever perpetrated in ancient or modern times. BILL TWEED—"Boss TWEED"—a man who a few years ago went through bankruptcy, and who is said to have boasted, within a year, that he had eighteen millions of dollars; and with him the tribe of Tammany Hall have been discovered and exposed. Some of them have gone to Europe, some of them are enjoying the pleasures of the healthful breezes and snow-drifts of Canada, some of them are in one part of the country and some in another. While we were trying Major HODGE, and sending him to the Penitentiary at Albany for ten years, with the approval of the entire Republican Party of the country, BILL TWEED, the greatest thief in all the history of the human family, the boss thief of the world [loud laughter and applause] was sent to Albany, not to the Penitentiary, but to the State-house as a State Senator by twelve thousand Democratic majority. [Applause.] These two cases illustrate exactly the difference between the two parties; the one denouncing thieves and arresting and punishing them when it can, the other punishing any of them. I am told by leading Democrats, some of them members of the Committee of Seventy, men who have done all they could to expose and break these men down, that they do not believe one of these thieves will ever go to the Penitentiary. They stole the Erie Railroad; they stole the State of New-York from Gen. GRANT in 1868; they have stolen their millions from the City; they have stolen judges and stolen juries, and they get elected to the Legislature; they do not get sent to the State Prison. And the men who denied this stealing, who denied that they stole the State of New-York, when they knew that they did it, who denied the stealing of these Tammany Hall men, until it was finally brought out and established so clearly that nobody should have denied it—these very men are accusing the Administration of stealing. I have heard of Satan's rebuking sin, but I never saw anything so brazen as this before. [Loud applause.]

SEE THIS!

There has been collected, under Gen. GRANT's Administration, in three years, nearly $1,200,000,000—nearly $400,000,000 a year; there has been paid out nearly $1,000,000,000, making about $2,100,000,000. We have lost, out of this immense sum, in all the Departments of the Government, $1,250,000—less than a fifteenth part of one per cent.! Look at the Post-office Department. With 45,000 postmasters, clerks and mail-carriers, the loss has been less than one-tenth of one per cent. in these three years. In no part of the world has such integrity been shown, under like circumstances. We have paid out, during these three years, $90,000,000 in pensions, and we have had five rebellions, all of them soldiers, and four of them shed their blood for the country. But the Government has not lost a dollar, for the agents made good their accounts, or their bondsmen did it for them.

WHAT HORACE GREELEY CALLS A "BAD RECORD."

This Administration came into power with the pledge to maintain the faith and honor of the country then wickedly assailed. During these last thirty-five months there has been paid $287,000,000, saving nearly $18,000,000 a year in interest. This money has been mostly saved on the one hand by an honest collection of the revenues—for we collected the first fifteen months of Gen. GRANT's administration $67,000,000 more than was collected under the same laws in the last fifteen months of JOHNSON's administration—and on the other hand, by a reduction of the expenses of the Government. From these two sources we have paid this $287,000,000. Throughout the financial world it is a matter of wonder and amazement that the financial policy of the United States should be so successful. We elected Gen. GRANT, pledged to maintain the faith of the nation, to make our debt sacred, and what is the result? Why, the seven hundred millions of currency is worth today a hundred and forty millions of dollars, twenty per cent., more than it was three years ago. The laboring man who has earned two dollars today has received forty cents, in real gold value, more than he would have received three years ago this day. There has been added twenty per cent. to every dollar the laboring men of this country have earned, and it has been added because of the signal ability and ability with which that pledge has been kept, to maintain the faith of the nation, honestly collect the revenues, reduce expenses and extinguish the national debt as fast as he could.

A BRIEF SKETCH OF THE PRESIDENT.

To hear these men talk, you would suppose Gen. GRANT was vastly inferior to such great magnificent statesmen as POLK, PIERCE and BUCHANAN. Who is Gen. GRANT—this man so denounced? When the war opened he was earning a few hundred dollars a year tanning leather out in Galena. He offered his services to the nation, and they were not accepted. He went down to Springfield, and served there for some weeks, helping to enroll and organize the regiments they were raising in Illinois. Finally they gave him a regiment. He had not money enough to buy a sword with which to fight the battles of his country, nor a horse to ride. You did not know anything about him; the nation knew nothing about him; few had heard of him. He had served in the Mexican war, when a young man, fresh from West Point, and won five brevets for gallant conduct, but nobody knew anything of this humble man. He took his regiment and marched away. He never asked anything of the Government; he never disobeyed an order; he never made any complaint. He went straight forward and did his duty, a quiet, silent, modest man. About the first thing we heard of him was that he took about twenty-five thousand men up the Tennessee River, moved on the enemy's works, attacked an army of twenty thousand rebels, and captured fifteen thousand of them. You next heard of him coming on the field of Shiloh, when it was nearly lost, and when they asked him if he had prepared for a retreat he said that one boat would take off that retreated. He defeated the rebel army that had been nearly victorious. Then he went down the Mississippi River, passed Vicksburg, made a movement into the country, attacked the rebel armies, captured Vicksburg, and then you find him at Chattanooga, to save a lost battle, and you have heard of the magnificent victory he won at Mission Ridge and at Lookout Mountain. He was then brought to Washington, and took command of the armies of the country, led the Army of the Potomac through the Wilderness, fighting every day in the month of May, 1864, put his army before Richmond, and when the hour came, moved upon the doomed city and received the surrender of the rebel army at Appomattox. Nineteen battles behind him, and all victories! He did not march his army to make a parade through the rebel capital, but started off alone, with his carpet-bag in his hand, for Washington, to stop the raising of troops and the manufacture of munitions, to make preparations to disband the army and save expense, and to save, what he regarded, and what we all regarded as a very important thing, a general bankruptcy in the country.

OBLOQUY AND REPROACH THE REWARD OF A FAITHFUL PUBLIC SERVANT.

We turned to this man when ANDREW JOHNSON failed us, and asked him to be President. He did not seek the Presidency; he felt and said that his place at the head of the army was the post for him. We made him President, and it was his strength and commanding influence that carried the Fourteenth Amendment. That same influence carried the Fifteenth Amendment, and gave the black men the right to vote in all the States. The men who stood by the cause of anti-slavery and the protection of the black man have found in Gen. GRANT a man who has stood bravely, steadily and consistently on the side of freedom and the equal rights of all men. He has been President three years, followed by obloquy and reproach. He has made some mistakes in appointments, no doubt; but the leading measures of his Administration are in the interest of the country. The masses of the people who have no grievances, who only want a good government, see it, feel it, realize it. They believe we have the best Administration this nation has seen for forty years; and they are right in this conviction. The Republicans of the country are looking to you, men of New-Hampshire, to recover your State.

Death of the Kentucky Governor's Servant.

From the Frankfort (Ky.) Commonwealth, Feb. 23.

DANIEL CLARKE, an old and faithful negro, who has stood for thirty odd years at his post as servant to the different Governors of the State since the time of JAS. CLARKE, died on Monday last, after a brief illness. He was born in Africa, and his first recollection was that of a boy playing with his comrades on the coast, whence he was seized and transferred to a slaver, and brought to this country. He resided in Clarke County prior to his coming to Frankfort, where he has now relatives residing, to whom he was accustomed to make visits. He accompanied JAMES CLARKE to Washington when the latter was elected to Congress, and on the accession of Gov. CLARKE to the Executive chair, he came to Frankfort and took his post of duty as servant to the Governor. From that day to this, he has steadily occupied his position, for more than thirty years, discharging his trust with satisfaction to all, and with an integrity and a faithfulness that exemplifies an upright life.

Recently the Legislature, actuated by a sense of justice, passed a law giving a pension to DANIEL CLARKE of $12 per month during the balance of his natural life. On the occasion of his death with obituary notice, testifying to his good qualities and excellencies of character, was spread upon the Executive journal, and a joint resolution, introduced into the Senate by Mr. WEBB, was passed by that body, wherein was expressed a just tribute to his memory and virtues. The resolution will also pass the House.

NOTES FROM THE PEOPLE.

The "French Arms" Mare's Nest.

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

Several articles, during the last few days, have been published in certain papers of a nature highly calumnious to our reputation. The occasion of their publication is the present political debate upon the French arms business. We never indulge in newspaper controversy, and it is with great reluctance that we feel compelled to ask the insertion of this communication. Yet a decent regard for public opinion impels us to say that these articles, consisting as they do of documents which were in the first instance sent to France for use there in the interests of M. PLACE, the late French Consul-General, are not, as a person unacquainted with the facts might suppose, by any means new. We have met them before in the Courts of France, on the trial of M. PLACE, and before the French Parliamentary Commission on Contracts, and we have completely refuted them in every respect. Indeed, a comparison of their allegations, with our invoices in the possession of the French Government, effectually disposes of them for the most part, and stamps the rest as utterly unworthy of belief.

After having failed in their object there, they are reproduced in La France, the organ of M. PLACE, and recopied here for the purpose of effect in the present political strife.

We pronounce them as untrue in every particular, and in their whole scope and meaning; and we await, with entire confidence, the publication of the report of the French Commission, to completely exonerate our house from these unjust imputations.

Yours, &c., E. REMINGTON & SONS.

The German Reform Movement.

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

The Central Committee of the German-American Reform associations in this City is at last organized. As this body represents about 18,000 German voters, it is thought to be of sufficient importance to be brought before the public through your estimable paper, which, in fact, started this grand reform movement by its untiring and persevering attacks upon the Tammany Ring. The election of Gen. SIGEL as Register showed the Germans that in united action with the honest American reformers of the Republican and Democratic parties the old corrupt Tammany Hall Democracy can be and must be beaten at every future election.

In former times a number of German clubs, associations of Republicans or Democrats, of house-owners, tax-payers, rent-payers, independent citizens, further societies of all sorts of political ideas and objects, were scattered all over the City. To unite these often opposing elements into one great uniform movement was the object of the German reform leaders. They hoped to attain this object by laying a foundation on the following practical principles: 1. Suppression of the corruption in the City Government. 2. Formation of a united German vote in non-partisan questions.

In the first plage it was necessary to inspire the Germans with the idea of unity. The great peace-festival of the Germans first opened their eyes to their numerical strength, and supported the leaders in this movement. The numerous lately-discovered frauds united almost all honest men in support of reform.

To use these favorable signs the leaders, not recognizing the different ward, district, or any independent societies and clubs, ordered an entire new registration of all German voters, who wished to join and form one "Verein" or club in each Assembly District. Notwithstanding great opposition, the new ideas gained every day, and the orders of the Conference Committee were carried out in less than two months. Each member had personally to sign the rolls. When there was a sufficient number a President and a Secretary were elected, and afterwards delegates to a Central Committee, whose duty it was to propose a new constitution for the General German Reform Party. This Committee first assembled on the 13th of December, 1871, and discussed the new constitution, which was in the third meeting accepted, and, according to its rules, a new Central Committee was elected, which met for the first time on Feb. 7. In accordance with this new constitution, one delegate represents fifty voters. To the officers of this Committee is committed the carrying out of its principles laid down in the constitution: 1. To elect or support only candidates of acknowledged ability and honesty, irrespective of party. 2. To hold the office-holders to strict and conscientious discharge of their duties. We think this last condition—conscientious discharge of duty—a good and novel introduction in political life in Gotham. The general complaint all over the city in political, commercial and domestic life, is the experience of finding men and women doing only so much labor for so much money. The question of a servant, be he a high or low official, a bricklayer or a clerk, a President or book-keeper, is not what duties have I to perform, but how little can I do for so much pay!

We find this only too true, and most lamentable state of affairs in a great many offices, public and private; particularly in the City offices, where there is no performance of work—but all pay. If the German reformers can introduce honesty and strict discharge of duty into our public life we shall acknowledge it with gratitude.

To show your readers that this movement is, in reference to City affairs, entirely non-partisan, (though it is explicitly understood that in questions of State and national politics, the Germans will follow their party affiliations,) we mention that the President is Mr. OSWALD OTTENDORFER, a Democrat; Mr. SIGISMUND KAUFMANN, First Vice-President, a Republican; Mr. MARCUS OTTERBOURG, a Democrat, and Dr. A. G. DUNN, a Republican, are Secretaries. The members of the Executive Committee are also equally divided by the two great parties. We hope they will accomplish their object—true reform.

A BERLINER.

Suburban Railroad Fares.

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

Your paper of this date contained a very interesting article on the duties of the Legislature, about to reconvene at Albany, and I was much disappointed that one of those duties, and that the most important to the interests of the City of New-York, should have been entirely overlooked, viz.: the rates charged by railroad companies in this State for transporting freight over their roads.

There is not a town between this City and Buffalo that is not filled with freight waiting for the opening of the Hudson River and Erie Canal, in order that it may be shipped to this market at reasonable rates. The merchants of Albany and all along the line of the Central Road west of that city are now buying their heavy goods in Boston, because the freight charges on the Albany and Boston Road are much less than they are over the road running from this City. While the merchants of Pittsburg, Wheeling, Cincinnati, and all the towns of the South-west are buying their heavy goods in Baltimore, because the rates charged over the Baltimore and Ohio Road are from ten to twenty cents per hundred less than those charged by other lines to the same points. Now, Sir, I have no desire to be regarded a croaker, but history and experience teaches that if a commercial city would hold its supremacy, it must guard against exorbitant charges either on goods entering or leaving such city, and, as a merchant of this City, it fills me with apprehension when I see the legitimate business of this City diverted to other and unnatural points in consequence of the unreasonable exactions of our railroad companies, and it seems to me that it should be the first and most important duties of our representatives to reduce and regulate railroad charges, and especially where heavy burdens are imposed on commerce to pay dividends on the watered stock of such companies.

An Incident in the Philadelphia Academy of Music.

From the Philadelphia Press, Feb. 26.

The good old custom of hissing at places of amusement shows signs of revival, and we are glad of it. The player looks forward to applause if he does well—why should he not also expect hisses if he does badly? But it is not always the people on the stage who deserve a good round of hisses. Sometimes, and not unfrequently, a portion of the audience will so conduct themselves as to annoy others, and confuse the actors. They are generally in boxes—representatives, indeed, of the upper ten. They come, not to look upon the performance, but to enjoy themselves after their own liking, wholly disregarding the pleasure or convenience of any save themselves. They talk and laugh loudly, and have even been known to carry the fun so far as to let down by strings from the upper to the lower box glasses, handkerchiefs, and the like, and to indulge in other similar monkey tricks. Exactly this sort of thing occurred at the Academy of Music the other evening. The offenders were ladies and gentlemen of the very crême de la crême of Philadelphia society. Nobody would dare express disapprobation of what they did—of course not! But suddenly somebody did, and the house resounded with hisses, in which the singers upon the stage were brave enough to join. The hisses had their effect, and the bon ton were silent and attentive thereafter. Deserved punishment, say we, and we trust it will be repeated hereafter whenever necessary.

THE SILK INTEREST.

Silkmen Before the Committee on Ways and Means—Growth of the Manufacture in this Country.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Feb. 28.—The Committee on Ways and Means today heard a delegation of silk manufacturers and operatives from New-York, New-Jersey, Massachusetts and Connecticut. They exhibited specimens of raw and manufactured silks of all kinds, excepting dress goods, showing the progress of the manufacture in this country both as to quality and quantity. They want the tariff to remain as it is, and say that under the protection afforded by it, aided as it was by the operation of the Anglo-French Free-trade Treaty, this industry has grown as follows: The capital invested has increased from $3,000,000 to $25,000,000. It now affords employment for 15,000 operatives, three-fourths of them women and young persons, for whom such employment is specially adapted, it being clean, light and healthy. The wages paid these operatives amounts to $7,200,000 per annum, being a weekly average for women of $7, and for males $12. One-third of these operatives are emigrants from Europe, and have become teachers for our native-born operatives. As compared with the above, the wages paid in the Austrian Tyrol for the same kind of work is from ninety cents to $1 for sixty-nine hours' work, the operatives having poor shelter and food, for which each pays forty-five cents a week. The delegation admit that silk goods are higher than before 1861; but this is mainly owing to the fact that all raw silks in the countries of production are now more than double the price they were immediately before 1861. One of the delegation, an operative, informed the Committee on Ways and Means that he could save as much here, after living better, as he could earn in the old country. The principal speaker was an Englishman from Macclesfield, now engaged in giving instruction in silk culture in this country, who said that the Anglo-French Free-trade Treaty had injured that trade in England. When asked by Mr. BROOKS, of New-York, what the duty was previous to that time, he replied, fifteen per cent.; under that rate they were all then doing well. As the manufacturers and operatives who today ask a tariff aid him, on that and treating that he thinks, of course, he will be treating those in whom he has lost confidence, the President does not possess. It may be his misfortune, but we doubt if the country will charge it upon him as a fatal fault.

A FIRST-CLASS NEW-YORK SECURITY AT A LOW PRICE.

The undersigned offer for sale the FIRST MORTGAGE SEVEN PER CENT. GOLD BONDS of the Syracuse and Chenango Valley Railroad, at 95 and accrued interest.
This road runs from the City of Syracuse to Smith's Valley, where it unites with the New-York Midland Railroad, thus connecting that city by a direct line of road with the Metropolis.
Its length is forty-two miles, its COST ABOUT $40,000 PER MILE, and it is MORTGAGED FOR LESS THAN $12,000 PER MILE; the balance of the funds required for its construction having been raised by subscription to the capital stock.
The road approaches completion. It traverses a populous and fertile district of the State, which insures it a paying business, and it is under the control of gentlemen of high character and ability. Its bonds possess all the requisites of an inviting investment. They are amply secured by a mortgage for LESS THAN NINE-THIRD THE VALUE OF THE PROPERTY. They pay SEVEN PER CENT. GOLD INTEREST, and are offered five per cent. below par. The undersigned confidently recommend them to all classes of investors.

FIRST MORTGAGE
GOLD BONDS.
THIRTY YEARS TO RUN, AND ISSUED FOR $20,000 PER MILE.
This road forms the shortest and most direct route from the great anthracite and semi-bituminous coal fields of Pennsylvania into the central part of this State, and will run in connection with the New-York Central Road, which it crosses at Cayuga Bridge. Traversing, as it does, the finest and most populous agricultural district, generally known as the "GARDEN OF THE STATE," its local traffic will be large, but its greatest source of revenue will be from its coal business. The road is being rapidly built, and will be in active operation during this year. From our knowledge of this enterprise, and after the most thorough investigation, we most confidently recommend the Bonds as a safe investment. We offer, for the present, the Bonds at 90 and accrued interest in currency.

OUR FILTHY STREETS.

How John L. Brown's Contract is Fulfilled.

The City Paying Thousands of Dollars for Inviting Pestilence—Mayor Hall's Singular Interest in Brown—The Provisions of the Contract.

One of the largest bills recently passed upon by the Board of Audit is that of JOHN L. BROWN for cleaning the streets. The bill for the work, since the last payment of $80,000 made by Controller GREEN, is $117,000. Of this the Board of Audit has paid $107,000, about $10,000 being left over. The payment of this bill has been severely criticised in some quarters. BROWN, it is said, has made a vast fortune by his contract, and the manner in which he has fulfilled its conditions is abundantly apparent to every one in the filthy and neglected condition of the streets. The cause of the promptness with which his bill has been audited is a little mysterious. BROWN has partners in his contract, and Mayor HALL has always shown an extraordinary interest in his welfare. The subjoined statements may be of interest at the present moment:

On the 9th of June, 1865, a contract for cleaning the streets of this City was entered into between C. GODFREY GUNTHER, Mayor; JOHN T. HOFFMAN, Recorder; MATTHEW T. BRENNAN, Controller; FRANCIS I. A. BOOLE, City Inspector, and JOHN E. DEVLIN, Counsel to the Corporation, Commissioners appointed by an act of the Legislature to make a contract for cleaning the streets of the first part, and JOHN L. BROWN, WILLIAM H. DEVOE and SHEPHERD F. KNAPP of the second part. For about one year the original contractors operated this contract, and then sold it to Judge JAMES R. WHITING for $250,000. $50,000 of which was paid down, and notes due at different times within fifteen months were given for the remaining $200,000. After the lapse of a year "Major" JOHN L. BROWN thought that in parting with the contract he had lost a good thing, and therefore by a skillful operation, he brought Judge WHITING financially to his knees, and compelled him to return the contract for the sum of $250,000. The contract holds good until the 9th day of June, 1875, and it is under it that the streets are now supposed to be cleaned, the present holders being BROWN and several other prominent politicians, who some months ago were profitable sleeping partners in a contract with the City Government, and who are still powerful enough to procure the auditing of BROWN's bill. BROWN brought Judge WHITING to his knees, it is said, through the agency of Mayor HALL. The latter refused to pay WHITING $180,000 due, on a flimsy pretext that his work had not been well done, and WHITING, who could often be seen in the filthy streets of the Sixth Ward, superintending the work in person, with hose in hand, was only too glad to sell his contract back to BROWN, the intimate friend of Mayor HALL. Strange to say, no sooner was the contract sold back to BROWN than Mayor HALL signed WHITING'S bill for $180,000.

Only enough copies of this contract to supply interested parties were printed, and then, one at a time have dropped out of sight and memory until only three or four are now in existence. One of them happened to come into the possession of the writer a day or two ago.

THE STRINGENT PROVISIONS OF THE CONTRACT.

The stringent provisions of the contract are well drawn, and are so hedged about with forfeitures, penalties, drawbacks and other checks that it would seem impossible to improve or strengthen it in any way; but to crafty contractors and interested officials almost anything is possible, and singular as it may seem, this BROWN and his confederates have been able to break almost every one of the obligations imposed upon them by this instrument without a single murmur or complaint on the part of the officials who, on the part of the City, should protect the rights of the people.

The first specification provides that "all the paved streets and avenues, and all lanes and alleys, and all gutters, wharves, piers, and heads of slips in the City of New-York, shall be well, faithfully and thoroughly cleaned, and all other work, labor, services, and other things required of the contractors, shall be well and thoroughly performed," and yet the most casual visitor to the City, or the most transient sojourner within its limits, cannot even approach its cleaner and more healthful portions without passing through a mass of filth, and foul and pest-breeding streets, lined on either side by over-crowded tenements, ready at any moment to become the centres of pestilence.

Frequent cleanings are called for by the second specification, which provides that "all the paved streets and avenues, and all lanes, alleys, and all gutters, wharves, piers, and heads of slips shall be swept at least once in each week, unless prevented by frost and snow."

Ashes and garbage form the subject of the third specification, which provides that "all ashes, garbage, rubbish, and sweepings of every kind, shall be removed from the streets in tight carts, every twenty-four hours, Sundays excepted."

Specification 4 provides that "the driver of each and every cart employed as an ash-cart or garbage-cart shall cause a bell, of the size now in use for that purpose, to be rung to give notice of the approach of the cart; and such drivers shall receive or take all "ashes, garbage, sweepings and rubbish" which may be delivered to them, or which they may find in the proper receptacles."

The fifth specification provides for certain services on portions of Broadway, Park-row, Chatham-street, the Bowery, Fourth, Fifth and Eighth avenues, State, Whitehall, Wall and Cortlandt streets, Maiden-lane, Fulton, Chambers, Grand and Canal streets. These services were performed in the greater part of the localities designated in a thorough manner. The fact is, that great care is taken to have the streets and avenues most frequented by the influential and wealthy classes kept most cleanly, while the sequestered narrow passages between long rows of lofty tenement-houses are allowed to remain in a condition filthy beyond measure.

The same specification provides that "all streets below Chambers-street, except around the markets and where the market-wagons stand, (which shall be cleaned daily in the forenoon,) shall be cleaned during the night," (certain hours being specified.) That this provision has been disregarded is shown clearly by the report of the City Sanitary Inspector, submitted to the Board of Health on Wednesday, the 30th of August, in which he makes fearful revelations in reference to the lower portion of the City.

None of these specifications have been complied with.

The next three sections need not be specially commented upon in this connection, as they have reference to the final disposition of the refuse matter removed from the streets, to the care of the streets in Winter, and to the use of Croton water in sprinkling the streets and washing the gutters, and yet BROWN would do well to point out under what clause of the sixth specification he obtains the authority to convert his own sunken lots on Second-avenue and East River from Ninety-sixth to One Hundredth and Tenth streets, into a dumping-ground, thereby augmenting their value hundreds of thousands of dollars, while at the same time the whole neighborhood is infected by the poisonous exhalations from the rotting refuse with which he is raising his property to the required grade.

The consideration for this work is expressed in the tenth section, and is $498,500 a year, ten per cent. of each semi-monthly installment of which is to be retained until the expiration of each contract year as security for the faithful performance of the work, and is then to be paid if there has been no delinquency. The real value of this contract is by no means expressed by the consideration agreed upon, though were all the provisions of the instrument carried out, the compensation would be by no means exorbitant; but when, in the first place, it is remembered that not one-half the necessary force of men has been employed; that the number of horses and carts has been totally inadequate to the work required to be done; that hotels and restaurants are compelled to pay extra for service to which they are legally entitled; that the refuse matter from the streets is appropriated to the private profit of the contractor, and that no penalties have been enforced, the subject assumes another phase.

During the time that Ex-Judge WHITING held the contract the profits were sufficient to pay a very large cash dividend to those interested; to pay for a stable and lot in Twenty-fourth-street large enough to hold 250 horses and carts, and now worth $100,000; to purchase horses, harness and carts worth $60,000, and to procure street-cleaning machines worth $50,000—all of which were transferred, with the contract, to the present holders.

Notwithstanding these facts—that BROWN has not performed the contract; that the very last year's profits "extra pour" from the Board of Health for performing his contract, is evidence that he was not doing his work faithfully; that he has never employed half the requisite number of men—Mayor HALL has signed the warrants for his pay.

One more fact. BROWN has had some trouble in getting his money. He does not, it is said, care for the contract any longer. He fears there may be investigation, and that the gold mine will be closed up. He wants to sell back to the City for $300,000 the contract for the remaining four years which he originally got from the City for nothing, and has made a vast fortune by. When the fine weather comes it will cost the city $60,000 more to remove the filth from the streets which BROWN has allowed to accumulate during the Winter months, and yet Mayor HALL publicly advises the purchase of the contract.

STEWART'S SPRING NOVELTIES.

Fine Exhibition at Stewart's Palatial Store—The Place Thronged by Visitors—Superb Array of Splendid Goods.

The retail store of A. T. STEWART was again thronged yesterday and yesterday evening by continuous crowds of the most fashionable people of the City. The attraction was the exhibition of Spring novelties, including every possible variety of temptation that could fascinate a female eye, or reduce to flaccidity a pocket-book. Crowded as were the halls throughout the day, in the evening they were still more so, and in fact from 7 until 9 there were many parts of the building which were so jammed that in spite of the effects of numerous policeman it became at moments impossible to advance or to recede. Though, perhaps, at other stores goods equally beautiful are shown, yet it must be conceded that there is no other building in which they can be shown to such advantage. On entering, the visitors advanced through a perfect avenue of the most exquisite cashmere shawls, arranged on dummies, to exhibit not only the fine colors and the delicate workmanship, but also the new style of wearing this article of the wardrobe so idolized by the fair sex. Many of these shawls were from $1,000 to to $5,000, and attracted the most loving glances from the lady visitors, while gentlemen escorts shivered with anticipations of possible demands in the future. At the end of this avenue the enchanted path debouched into the opening under the rotunda, which was brilliantly illuminated with hundreds of gas-jets, and afforded a coup d'œil so gorgeous in its lights and colors, so splendid in materials and so dazzling in the general effect, as to excite the most apathetic lady into feverish enthusiasm. The sides of the rotunda in the upper stories were hung with the most superb carpets, Axminsters, Aubussons and others of every possible manufacture and variety. Above these waved numerous American flags, and above, from every point of the base of the dome to the centre, stretched bright bands of red, white and blue cloths. Underneath this combination of all that could dazzle was enchanted ware in long table on which two dresses, one white and the other black, each trimmed with peacock's feathers in a very fanciful fashion. The workmanship was exquisite, and the materials rich, but it appeared to be the general opinion of the fair visitors that the costumes were rather strange than beautiful, and more to be praised for their ingenuity of decoration than admired for their effect. On each side of this central cynosure of wandering eyes were pyramids of kid glove boxes showing the bright colors within. The side walls of the scene were masses of the most exquisite silks; on the right hand were all the new tints termed atlantique, comprising some thirteen new shades, and on the left were rich brocades of every possible pattern and color. Beyond these were more silks, and every variety of Spring muslins and mousselines de laine, poplins, Japan silks, and fabrics just born to bless the fashionable world in the Spring time. Conspicuous among the last were the Dolly Varden prints, whose special attraction generally consists in the pattern resembling the chintz bed curtains and spreads of the last generation. The most admired of these were those that presented brilliant blue, red and orange colors upon a black ground. Upstairs there were displays of the most delicate laces, some of which were so beautiful in design as even to commend themselves to the male eye. There were dresses of English point, in which the flowers were wrought almost in relief, and the intermediate parts seemed as frail and flimsy as a spider's web. There were others of point applique not so fine, but still strikingly beautiful. For imitations of thread the Leama laces were specially admired by ladies who were connoisseurs on the point, and some went so far as to say that the imitation was almost as beautiful as the original. Of gentlemen's goods there was displayed an immense variety on the upper floors. The exhibition will be continued throughout today, and will close this evening at 9 P. M.

Commencement of the College of Physicians and Surgeons—Address by Rev. Henry Ward Beecher.

The sixty-fifth annual Commencement of the College of Physicians and Surgeons, took place last evening before a crowded audience at Steinway Hall. The proceedings were opened with prayer by Rev. Dr. HUTTON, after which the names of the members of the graduating class for 1872 having been read, President DELAFIELD addressed the class relative to the responsibilities which, as members of a great profession, rested upon them. Prof. DALTON announced the prizes to the class as follows: First prize, WILLIAM TILLINGHAST BULL, Newport, R. I.; second prize, PETER A. S. BOEZEKS, New-York. Honorable mention was made of EDWARD A. HENSCHELL, New-York City; GEORGE C. GAGE, Alabama; JOHN H. SEABURY, New-York; THOMAS N. BRADFIELD, New Jersey; CORNELIUS GILMAN TROW, Massachusetts. The Otis Prize was awarded to F. W. CHAPIN, of New-York. The prize of the Alumni Association for 1872 was awarded to FRANK T. FOSTER, M. D., of this City, of the Class of 1862.

Rev. HENRY WARD BEECHER was then introduced by President DELAFIELD. Mr. BEECHER addressed the graduating class. He said that the graduates went forth to do a great work, and that most of them would have to work their way up to success; but to be obliged to work in this country was no discouragement. There were no men who earned their honors more faithfully than the practitioners of medicine, but he advised the graduates not to make the practice of their profession a mere matter of selfishness. The love of truth should be higher than the love of personal aggrandizement. The future would augment the functions of the medical profession. The time would come when that profession would experience a great change on one side and a great advancement on the other. Many men were now their own doctors, as many were now their own lawyers, and the medical practitioner or legal counsel was not called in except in cases of exigency. Mr. BEECHER said that God was perpetually revealing truth, and that all Divine revelation was not to be found in the Bible. There was sin enough in the liver to call it the Devil's den. It was the duty of the physician to teach men how to be healthy. He should teach the race how to live, so that health might be preserved. There was not more than one man in a hundred who knew what his stomach was made for. Mr. BEECHER spoke in regard to the sewage of cities, and concluded by urging the graduates to perform their highest duty with fidelity to God and the glorious principles of the profession they had adopted.

At the conclusion of Mr. BEECHER'S address, SAMUEL SWIFT, of the graduating class, delivered the valedictory address, after which the audience was dismissed with the benediction.

Suicide at Paterson—An Unknown Lad Shoots Himself on an Erie Railway Train.

An unknown young man committed suicide on the 2 o'clock train from Patterson to New-York yesterday, just as the train was leaving the depot. A lad having the general appearance of a German, took his seat in the second car, and as the train had just got fully under way, without any word of warning to any one, he drew a three-barreled pistol, placed the muzzle above his right ear and fired. He fell dead instantly. The trainwas stopped and run back to the depot, where the body was left in charge of the depot master, and afterward turned over to Coroner BERRY. Deceased was apparently about eighteen years of age. In one of his pockets was found a slip of paper on which was written the name PAUL BALLITTI, and a card on which were printed the names FR. DAVID WEIDER, and LOUISE HENLHOFF. The only other articles found were a comb, a cigar, two newspapers, an order of dancing in German, and a programme from Niblo's. No money nor railroad ticket was found. The body was viewed by several hundred persons, but was not identified.

The German Hospital and Dispensary.

The Directors of the German Hospital and Dispensary have just issued their annual report, from which it appears that during the past year 718 patients were treated at the Hospital—605 males and 113 females. The receipts during the year amounted to $26,516 99; the expenses were $26,183 65, leaving a balance of $333 34. The receipts from patients amounted to $14,990. The Tammany Society—Meeting of Committee from the Bachelors and General Committee.

The Committee of twenty-two appointed by the Tammany Society to reorganize the Tammany Democracy, assembled at Tammany Hall last evening. The object of the meeting was the reception of the Committee of twenty-two from the Tammany General Committee to settle the dispute as to the rights of the latter to meet in Tammany Hall. The meeting was secret, and but little knowledge of what was being done could be obtained. Committees from five Wards who sent contesting delegations to the General Committee at its last meeting, appeared to urge their respective claims to recognition. This consumed the greater part of the evening. The Committee of three appointed by the General Committee to agree with the Society upon a plan of reorganization, is understood to have submitted a report, the nature of which has not been made public.

The members of the General Committee gathered in large force in the theatre and lobbies, waiting anxiously for the close of the deliberations.

A CHARGE AGAINST CARDOZO.

A Case for the Judiciary Investigating Committee—An Extraordinary Delay—A Decision in a Simple Case Withheld for Two Years.

For the benefit of the Judiciary Investigating Committee appointed by the Legislature to inquire into the charges of corruption and malfeasance in office against some of our City Judges, the following case, to which their attention is directed, is given. It shows, on the part of one of the accused Judges, neglect of duty which in itself is sufficient to call for a searching investigation, laying aside any other suspicion which may attach to the case.

About six years ago JAMES EGAN died suddenly, leaving seven houses situated in East Twenty-fourth and Twenty-seventh streets, together with ten lots up-town. Having no issue, his wife arranged with his two sisters, the only relatives in this country, that each would receive a third of the rents from the seven houses, allowing the matter of the lots to lie in abeyance. One of the deceased's sisters was married to one JOHN WALSH, and had a large family of children. The other was unmarried. The latter being of a religious disposition, and needing but little for her own support, agreed with Mrs. WALSH to take $50 a month for her third of the rent, on condition that the remainder of her share would be spent in educating Mrs. WALSH'S children. This part of the arragement Mrs. WALSH refused to perform, and Miss EGAN then claimed her full share. Mrs. WALSH'S husband, who had been appointed agent to collect the rents, &c., refused to pay Miss EGAN more than the $50 per month. After consulting with friends she instituted a suit against WALSH, in the Supreme Court. The hearing came on in the March term, 1870, before Judge CARDOZO. The case was argued by leading counsel on both sides, and Judge CARDOZO promised to give his decision immediately.

Weeks and months passed, and no decision was rendered. Miss EGAN'S lawyer frequently reminded the Judge of the case, and pressed for a decision, especially as WALSH had ceased paying even the $50 a month at the commencement of the suit. After repeated requests for a decision in the case, Miss EGAN'S attorney became tired, and considered it useless to speak to Judge CARDOZO about the matter any more. He then called upon the Judge's nephews, and begged them to remind the Judge of the case, but all to no purpose. A friend of Miss EGAN'S called upon Judge CARDOZO, and informed him that WALSH, pending the rendering of the decision, was selling part of the property, and also refused to give Miss EGAN one cent of the rents. The Judge replied that he could not help that, but would give a decision soon.

So matters stood until the January Term of the present year, when the Judge was again applied to for a decision, one way or another, in the case. The reply was that the stenographer of the Court had "lost the notes" in the case, and he could give no decision. The case would again have to come to trial! In the meantime WALSH was disposing of the property and pocketing the proceeds of the sale, as well as Miss EGAN'S third of the rent of the seven houses.

Miss EGAN is a simple-minded woman, who, from her sad experience, believes that there is no such thing as justice or even law in New-York, and so has let the matter drop, sooner than incur the trouble and expense of a new trial.

THE NEW-JERSEY LEGISLATURE.

Jersey City Municipal Affairs—Woman Suffrage Petition—Railroad Measures—Lands Under Water at Communipaw.

From Our Own Correspondent.

TRENTON, Wednesday, Feb. 28, 1872.

A memorial was presented in the Senate today from the Hudson County Grand Jury, asking relief for the people of Jersey City "from the fraudulent and burdensome charter foisted upon that city by a former Legislature." The memorial complains that "there is not even a semblance of local self-government under the charter; that the Police, Fire and Water Departments, the paving, opening and improvement of streets, the construction of sewers, the repairing and sweeping of streets, and the gathering of garbage, all matters relating to the public health, the appointment of Police Justices, the increase of the city debt, and all of the legislative, executive and financial affairs of the city Government are placed in the hands of irresponsible Commissioners, in the appointment of whom the citizens of Jersey City have had no voice, the Commissions themselves having been created against the protests of the most prominent citizens and tax-payers." The memorialists add that notwithstanding the perpetration of enormous frauds, the Grand Jury has been unable to "ferret out and present for punishment the persons offending," and they therefore demand, as the only sure remedy for increasing ills, "a complete restoration of local government to the hands of the people interested."

The Grand Jury sending up this memorial is the same which recently found indictments for malfeasance against the members of the Police and Fire Boards of Jersey City. These Boards are under Republican control, and the Grand Jury is Democratic. There is, perhaps, ground for an investigation into the proceedings of these and other branches of the municipal Government, but it is not probable that the Legislature will order an inquiry, especially as bills for the modification of the powers of the several Commissions are now awaiting action in both Houses.

In the House, today, a memorial from LUCY STONE and others in favor of woman suffrage was presented and read. An important supplement to the Morris and Essex Railroad was introduced. It requires the lessees of that road to raise the track on iron bridges at a sufficient distance above the level of three main streets in Newark to admit of the passage of vehicles without interruption. Among the bills introduced in the Senate today was one to incorporate the Hudson County Fair Ground Association, with a capital of $50,000, and one providing for the abolition of all tollroads in Passaic County. Among the bills passed by the House was the following: To authorize Newark to issue $200,000 on school bonds, supplement to savings banks, requiring classified reports of deposits, to incorporate the Union Gas-light Company of Hudson County. The bills to authorize the extension of the West Lane Railroad and to incorporate the Bound Brook and Raton Railroad—known as ASA PACKARD'S projects—which passed the House yesterday, were today laid over in the Senate.

Mr. TAYLOR introduced in the Senate today a bill to incorporate the New-Jersey Company, with a capital of $5,000,000, for the purpose of more closely consolidating the interests connected with the old Camden and Amboy Railroad management. The passage of the bill will concentrate under one management all the varied ramifications of the united companies, and do away with much of the involved machinery now connected therewith.

EVENING BUSINESS.

The military horse Blucher was sold at $330, not one-eighth of the price originally paid for him. The saddle-horses were disposed of at prices ranging from $500 to $750. A pair of black carriage-horses, a very showy team, sold at $1,020 the pair. A clarence, the original cost of which was $4,000, and which was made to order, was disposed of at $1,350. The balance of the articles brought about the same prices, and the total amount of the sale was about $60,000.

NORTH CAROLINA SENATORSHIP.

Reports of the Senate Committee on Elections Against and for Mr. Abbott.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 28.—The report of the majority of the Committee on Privileges and Elections on the memorial of JOSEPH C. ABBOTT, claiming a seat as Senator from North Carolina, is a voluminous paper, elaborately reviewing the testimony and arguments adduced in the case in the light of the great number of parliamentary and judicial precedents and decisions. They state the claim of ABBOTT to be that the votes cast for VANCE, known to be an ineligible candidate, were nullities, and consequently that the candidate who received the next highest number of votes was elected. The Committee admit that this view of the case is supported by the general tenor of the English authorities and decisions, but these they say are based upon a very different rule from those adopted in the United States, where the Government is based on the theory that the power emanates from the people, and that the majority have a right to govern. The Committee cites many American authorities on this subject, and also calls attention to the provision of the Fourteenth Amendment for the removal of disabilities by Congress, which constitutes another striking point of difference between American and English cases, saying: "It is difficult to conceive how the Constitution could grant authority to Congress to remove the disabilities under which an individual who has been elected is laboring, and allow him to take his seat as a member, and yet at the same time embrace the idea that such an election is wholly void, and the votes cast for him nullities. Yet Congress, by its action, has given the first construction to this clause of the Constitution, and if he memorialist in this case be admitted to his seat, the Senate will have to give the second construction. The majority further argue that it was not an unreasonable expectation that VANCE'S disabilities would be removed, and the votes for him were therefore not purposely thrown away. They also hold that the act of July 25, 1866, is a bar to ABBOTT'S claims, and for these and other reasons minutely set forth, the majority of the Committee report a resolution that he is not entitled to a seat. The majority consist of Senators MORTON, LOGAN, HILL, THURMAN and ANTHONY. Senators HILL and CARPENTER take precisely the opposite view of the case and submit a minority report setting forth at very great length the reasons which have compelled them to dissent. They adduce numerous English and American decisions in support of their views, and in the course of their argument insist that the circumstances which may well induce the House of Representatives to depart from the ancient rules and practice in determining the elections of its members do not exist in relation to the election of Senators, the votes for whom are matters of record and cast viva voce and not by ballot. It is, therefore, easy to ascertain whether such votes were cast in ignorance of a candidate's ineligibility.

Another Phase of the Jumel Suit.

The cross-examination of Mr. NELSON CHASE was continued yesterday in the Jumel case. The main points on which he testified related to the estate, the moneys he had received from it, the improvements he had made and their cost, and the income derived from the property. He admitted to have received from Ex-Controller CONNOLLY $45.000 for land taken by the Croton Water Department. He acknowledged also receiving from the same source $125,000 for land that was taken by the new boulevards, besides $35,000 as rents from various parties, $24,000 for property on Seventh-avenue, and $18,000 on bond and mortgage from Mme. JUMEL. The plaintiff's counsel produced from the Controller's office receipts signed by CHASE for $244,892 50, and checks drawn to his order by CONNOLLY, and indorsed by CHASE, for that sum, minus $27,000, which was paid by CHASE'S direction by the Controller to SCUDDER & CARTER, CHASE'S attorneys, which check was produced in Court. Mr. CHASE accounted for these various amounts, except about $125,000 which he could not account for other than that he had spent it for family uses and in defraying the expenses of various litigations. Mr. CHASE further stated that for all the litigations in which Mr. CHARLES O'CONOR had been engaged for him, from the time of the death of Mme. JUMEL down to the present, he had not paid Mr. O'CONOR a dollar, but had borrowed various sums of money from him during that time, and Mr. O'CONOR now held his (CHASE'S) bonds for $75.000. Mr. CHASE, moreover, stated that Mr. O'CONOR knew that there were no means of paying these bonds unless CHASE succeeded in the Jumel ejectment suit.
